Nazis Reported Fleeing Headlong From Center; Claim Leningrad Gain

Counter Blows Crush 3 German Drives On Vast Front; Other Lines Firm

By the Associated Press

Moscow (Thursday), Sept. 11. Mighty Red counter blows have crumpled three German drives on the vital central front and Soviet defenders are standing firm on the approaches to Leningrad, Kiev and Odessa, Russian front dispatches said today.

These savage counterattacks aimed to relieve pressure on those besieged cities were not detailed in the early morning communique, but war correspondents said Nazi troops, defeated in the 26-day battle of Yelnya with a loss of from 75,000 to 80,000 men, were in headlong flight westward toward mined Smolensk, 40 miles away.

[A Berlin radio broadcast admitted that Russian forces were 60 kilometers (37½ miles) from Smolensk, the United Press reported.]

Nazis' 29th Division Routed

The morning communique told only of continuing fierce fighting along the entire front and of repeated German air attacks on Leningrad, the big Baltic city.

Some German bombers broke through Leningrad's defense Tuesday and dropped explosives and incendiaries but 31 planes were shot down, the communique said. On Monday 39 German planes compared to 27 Russian were shot down, it was added.

In the Gomel area, midway between Kiev and Smolensk, the Twenty-ninth German Infantry Division was said to have been routed leaving thousands of dead on the battlefield. The third prong of the counter assault was said to have driven the Germans back across the river "N" after a five-day tank battle.

The battle of Yelnya was fought along a 38-mile front, the Russians said. The Germans concentrated their heaviest artillery fire of the war along both sides of a bottleneck through which the German troops retreated from Yelnya, the dispatches reported.

Large Convoy Reaches Port

The Red Army, however, was said to have closed the gap, catching many Germans in a trap. It was believed these were a part of the eight divisions which the Russians said Monday had been routed.

At Leningrad, workers in defense factories sent a delegation to the front and received assurances from political commissars that "Fascist scoundrels will never enter our glorious city."

At Kiev, the Ukraine capital, dispatches reported, schools all re-

Industrial City 'Still Shooting From All Barrels,' Reich Admits

Berlin, (Thursday), Sept. 11 (AP). German military reports said today that a number of Soviet field fortifications blocking the German advance on Leningrad had been destroyed in terrific dive-bombing raids.

The raids also were said to have silenced a number of Soviet anti-aircraft and artillery positions about Leningrad.

Leningrad's waterworks received several direct bomb hits and large fires resulted, the dispatches said.

The reports of intensified Luftwaffe activity came as Germans described Leningrad as "still shooting from all barrels" in a red-hot defense.

There were intimations that to avoid a costly storming operation the Nazi high command might try to starve, shell and bomb the city to surrender.

Authorized sources acknowledged that Leningrad still had access to Lake Ladoga, but declared that the value of this route was diminishing rapidly and that all land approaches were cut off, with German forces within 15 miles of the city at the nearest point.

The effects of hunger and internal confusion as aids in breaking the Russian resistance were described as unpredictable elements, and Germans in responsible positions shunned speculation on the possible duration of the Leningrad siege.

Dienst Aus Deutschland, an authoritative commentary, asserted that there would be no unnecessary sacrifices of of lives to gain a swift triumph. It reiterated previous German declarations that the Nazis were not interested in "prestige successes."

"The fate of Leningrad, with three million inhabitants and about one million Soviet troops encircled within it, undoubtedly will be considerably influenced by the food problem," Dienst stated.

German artillery continued to pump shells into the city, and fliers reported the fires set in industrial and military plants guided them to their targets.

The Germans were using some of their biggest and best guns on Leningrad. A German weekly newsreel which foreign correspondents were shown in advance today included action shots of long-range cannot bombarding the city.

They were gigantic weapons partly concealed in trees, having great barrels which vibrate like a snapped whip for seconds after their pon-

Firing Squad Rules Oslo After Strikes

Factory Workers Walk Out on Jobs, Refuse to Return In Blow at Quisling

By the United Press

Oslo (via Berlin), Sept. 10.—German military authorities armed with the power of life and death ruled Oslo tonight under a state of emergency and rigid martial law clamped on the capital area after an outbreak of strikes.

[Oslo reports to Stockholm said a general strike had been called in Oslo for Thursday as a protest against a speech on September 5 by Vidkun Quisling, Norwegian Nazi leader, which aroused intense indignation among workers. Members of the Nasjonal Samling, Norway's Nazi Party, have said openly of late that a "new order" for trade union organizations would be carried out soon.]

Courts-martial charged with handling violations of the emergency decree were empowered to send defendants before a firing squad, sentence them to life at hard labor or at the very least give them ten years.

[Oslo reports to Stockholm said two persons had been sentenced to death and executed immediately by firing squads.]

Berlin Blames Communists

German occupation authorities served blunt notice that any resistance would be broken by armed force. The warning dovetailed with a recent government declaration that violence would be met with violence in case of resistance against Norwegian collaboration in the "new European order."

(Berlin authorities said the Oslo measures were designed to deal with an outbreak of strikes ascribed to Communist elements who "criminally disturbed peaceful work."

(Stockholm dispatches said strong German army concentrations surrounded Oslo, controlling all roads and arresting those lacking special permits to enter the capital.

(The Stavanger, Norway, radio was heard broadcasting that Communists were forbidden to participate in the administration of trade unions or to interfere in any way with industrial activity.

Workers Simply Walk Out

The emergency was proclaimed by Josef Terboven, German commissioner for the occupied country. It was implemented by specific orders issued by the German police chief, Wilhelm Redless.

Strikes were forbidden. A curfew was ordered for 7 p. m. to 4 a. m. All cinemas and theaters were closed. All traffic was halted, except by rail, after 6:30 p. m. Dancing was forbidden. Restaurants were ordered closed at 6 p. m.

Several strikes broke out in Oslo Tuesday. The factory workers simply walked out, declaring they

Taking Inventory

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

A monumental listing of America's total material requirements, both military and civilian, broken down into finished armament items, raw materials, labor and machinery necessary for their production, was ordered last night by the new Supply Priorities and Allocations Board.

Placed in full charge of assembling the huge inventory—considered an indespensable requisite both for adequate military planning and production and for maintenance of the civilian economy—was Donald M. Nelson. This assignment, coupled with his existing posts as head of the OPM priorities section, holding life and death authority over industry, and as executive director of the all-powerful SPAB, makes Nelson the undisputed civilian head of the Nation's defense effort, observers believed.

Meantime, in a continuation of his machine-gun tempo which has brought more action in the defense effort in the last two weeks than in any other period since its inception, Nelson yesterday:

1. Jerked down to a sudden halt the Nation's phenomenal industrial building boom by a SPAB policy announcement that expansion of productive capacity for civilian demand can no longer be undertaken if the expansion requires use of large quantities of materials critically needed for defense;

2. Cut through administrative red tape by permitting the grant of a priority rating merely by stamping the application, rather than by the cumbersome process of filling out a complete preference rating certificate;

3. Announced an end to the "voluntary" system of priority ratings applying to civilian orders and those of nonmilitary Federal agencies and of foreign governments, and decreed that in the future all priority ratings would be mandatory.

In other action yesterday, accelerating an already speeded-up

The Neutrality Act's Future

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Congressional leaders of both parties have been invited to the White House this morning for a conference portending important foreign policy developments.

A half a dozen key legislators invited to the conference received no advance information of the nature of the talk, but they assumed it would deal with the President's delayed address to the Nation tonight.

Possibility that leaders may be consulted on modification or repeal of the Neutrality Act to free war zone restrictions and permit merchantmen to arm against attack was suggested in one responsible Capitol Hill quarter.

There was no confirmation of this, but the President was known to have revised his speech in the light of the sinking of the American freighter Steel Seafarer in the Red Sea and the torpedoing of the American-owned Panamanian flag freighter Sessa off Iceland. At the least, a tightening and broadening of American naval patrol operations and further measures to protect merchantmen were expected.

A call for all members of Congress "to return to Washington early next week," meanwhile, was issued by Acting Speaker Woodrum on behalf of Speaker Rayburn, now in Bonham, Tex.

Woodrum said the call related primarily to an expected agreement on the tax bill Tuesday. The House already had voted to return to business Monday, but an informal agreement allowed members a week's leeway in returning.

Senate Minority Leader McNary as well as House Republican Leader Martin were invited to this morning's White House talk—first bipartisan legislative conference since

'Force for Force' Reply to Germany For Attacks on Ships Is Awaited Tonight

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt, still mourning the death of his mother on Sunday and further sobered by the mounting gravity of the country's international position, returned to the Capital last night and within half an hour was in confidential conference with his Army, Navy and diplomatic advisers.

The highly important talk was a forerunner of others that will be held today in preparation for the President's broadcast to the world at 9 o'clock tonight, when he is expected to deal with additional security steps called for by recent attacks on American shipping.

Repeal of the Neutrality Act, arming of merchant ships, and directing the Navy to "shoot first" in case of any threat at sea all were reported in various Capital sources to be under consideration by the President.

Hull Boards Train

He and Mrs. Roosevelt reached the Capital at 9:15 last night from Hyde Park, where the President's mother, Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt, had been buried on Tuesday. Both were attired in black, and Mr. Roosevelt wore a mourning band on his arm.

Secretary of State Hull immediately boarded their special train and remained in conversation with them for 10 minutes. The three then drove to the White House, where at 8:45 p. m. the Chief Executive, the Secretary of State, Secretary of Navy Knox, Secretary of War Stimson and Harry Hopkins, lend-lease administrator, began their discussion of menacing war developments and added steps this country may be called on to take for its defense.

The conferees after almost two hours in the White House stood by a previous agreement not to talk to the press about their meeting.

Address Lengthened

Congressional leaders of both parties have been invited to confer with Mr. Roosevelt today and it was assumed that he will give them a preview of tonight's eagerly awaited address.

So grave has the foreign situation become in the last week that Mr. Roosevelt yesterday considerably lengthened the address, which now is expected to last 25 minutes instead of the originally scheduled 15. It will be carried by all broadcasting chains in this country and will be sent around the world in many languages by short-wave radio.

Even before the President arrived back in the Capital, the State

Recreation Plans

By Howard F. Wentworth
Post Staff Writer

To provide Washington with a public recreation system unrivaled in the country, the National Parks Office yesterday asked the Commissioners for one million dollars to begin work during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1943.

This was part of a combined $2,184,895 budget estimate submitted to the city heads by the Parks Office, the National Capital Park and Planning Commission and the Zoo.

Ultimate development of a District recreation system to cost some 18 million dollars already has the approval of the Park and Planning Commission, and the President's Committee on Recreation, the budget report pointed out.

It is contemplated that the proposed system will eventually include 156 units and a program for its progressive development has been drafted by the Committee for the Coordination of Plans for the Recreation System, the Commissioners were told.

The program, it was further repointed, was developed under the direction of the President's special committee and has been indorsed by all agencies involved.

"Relief today" was the promise of the weather man last night after a day of sultry heat drove the mercury to 96 degrees in the hottest September 10 in Washington weather annals.

The hot weather brought one drowning and seven heat prostrations here.

Yesterday's peak temperature—recorded at 2:55 p. m.—topped the previous record for September 10, in 1897, when the mercury reached 95.9 degrees.

20-Degree Drop

While the humidity was a moderate 38 per cent when the high temperature was registered, the humidity was up to 70 per cent at 9 a. m.

A 20-degree drop from the day's high by midnight last night proclaimed the arrival of a "cold wedge" from the lake regions, scattering before it the tropical air front which broiled Washington and the mid-Atlantic States for the past two days.

A low of 63 degrees was expected by early morning, and today the mercury is expected to stay below 80 degrees, giving the Capital clear skies and comfortable weather for at least two days.

Gas Shortage Over, Senate Report to Say

Probers' Statement, Due Today, to Ease 'Public Anxiety'

A report stating, in substance, that the East's gasoline shortage is over is expected to be presented to the Senate today.

Senator Francis Maloney (Democrat), of Connecticut, chairman of the special committee whose investigation of the petroleum situation was closed yesterday—at least temporarily—implied as much last night.

"I think the shortage is over," he declared, explaining that the committee's report to the Senate will be "preliminary, very brief and intended to relieve public anxiety."

Nevertheless, at the closing session of the hearing Senator Maloney agreed with Ralph K. Davies, acting petroleum coordinator, that conservation is necessary and that the proposed construction of a huge pipeline from the Gulf Coast to the Atlantic Seaboard has its merits in assuring a steady supply.

"You can't sink a pipeline and you can't give it away," he declared, apparently in reference to this country's transfer of at least 50 tankers to Britain.

The chairman said his committee will stand by to resume hearings, if the need arises, "but I hope we don't have to."

Davies, the final witness, testified that joy-riding and nonessential driving must be curtailed this fall and winter. Plans are in order for strict rationing of gasoline and fuel oil but these will not be effected except as a last resort, the acting coordinator declared.

He forecast a 20-million barrel decline in the East's supply of all petroleum products by the end of

Willkie Terms Senator's Charges 'Red Herring'

By Hedley Donovan
Post Staff Writer

Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, asserted yesterday that "five or six men" in Hollywood are spreading war propaganda through a monopolistic control of the motion picture industry, "too dangerous for any democracy to permit."

The Missouri isolationist said that the press and, to a lesser extent, the radio, air both sides of the current controversy over American foreign policy, but that the motion picture industry permits "not one word on the side of the argument against war."

Clark's testimony before the Senate subcommittee investigating war propaganda charges against the movies drew a sharply worded reply from Wendell Willkie, counsel for the film industry.

It was the third public statement issued yesterday by Willkie, who has been invited to testify before the subcommittee but has been refused permission to crossexamine witnesses.

Charge Called "Red Herring"

The 1940 Presidential candidate called Clark's monopoly charge a "red herring." He described the Senate investigatiors as a "rump subcommittee" and declared:

"I think the time has come to end the sport of United States Senators badgering and threatening unprotected witnesses on the one hand, and refusing to allow those who are being accused to have a hearing."

Senator Clark said Willkie was trying "to turn this inquiry into a

'Gestapo' Dropped In Police Shakeup

Maj. Edward J. Kelly, superintendent of police, yesterday announced the abolition of the department's Special Investigations Squad, branded as a local police "Gestapo" during the recent Congressional hearings.

Acting Capt. Earl P. Hartmann, head of the squad, will be sent to a police precinct as a lieutenant. The 20 members of the unit will be reassigned, some to join the expanded Public Relations Squad of the detective bureau.

Establishment of a subversive activity unit was also announced by Chief Kelly.

School Board Takes First Step Toward Obtaining 1-Cent Milk

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

Appointment of a special committee to gather necessary data preliminary to formal application for a Federal 1-cent milk program in low income area schools was approved yesterday by the Board of Education.

Action was taken on recommendation of Robert L. Haycock, acting superintendent of schools. He will submit his nominations for membership on the research group at the board's next meeting on Wednesday.

Haycock asserted that members of the committee will be chosen from among the District officials and civic and welfare leaders who are working for extension of the Agriculture Department's relief milk program to the Capital's thousands of undernourished boys and girls.

The Surplus Marketing Administration, administering agency, has stated that it will inaugurate a penny-half-pint project here provided a 270 per cent increase in consumption can be demonstrated in those schools where the low cost bottles are provided.

It will, accordingly, be the task of the research committee to sift

Parleys to End D.C. Truck Tieup Still Deadlocked

Settlement efforts in the truck strike, which has induced a railroad embargo of miscellaneous freight shipments into Washington, today enters a fourth day—still in the hands of Labor Department Conciliator Frank J. Sheehan after plans for Congressional negotiations bogged down.

Representatives of the striking union, the A. F. of L. Drivers, Chauffers and Helpers Local 639, and 22 local trucking companies were still deadlocked yesterday after a three-hour conference.

Earlier, Senator McCarran, chairman of the Senate District Committee, rejected proposals of Representative Randolph, chairman of the House District Committee, that the two attempt to bring the contesting parties together. McCarran said there was sufficient machinery already set up to handle the situation.

President Is Left Bulk of Mother's Estate in Will

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Sept. 10 (AP). Sara Delano Roosevelt left the bulk of her estate of "over $5000 real and over $5000 personal property" to her President son in a will filed for probate today with the surrogate of Dutchess County where she had lived many years.

The will, dated September 20, 1928, placed one-tenth of the residue in six equal trust funds for her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Anna Eleanor Roosevelt, and five grandchildren, Mrs. John Boettiger, and James, Elliott, Franklin D. and John A. Roosevelt.

Mrs. Roosevelt bequeathed $5000 to weathered St. James' church, Hyde Park, behind which she was buried yesterday. She died Sunday at the family home in Hyde Park.

The President, Arthur J. Morris, Poughkeepsie banker, and Henry T. Hackett, Poughkeepsie attorney, were named executors.

Steam Blast Rocks Greenwich Village

New York, Sept. 10 (AP).—A giant underground steam main exploded tonight and tore a crater-like hole measuring 800 square feet in a downtown street as a roaring 150-foot geyser of steam, dirt and debris shot skyward.

Police officials said it was a "miracle" that none of several persons injured was seriously hurt, for the force of the thunderous blast rocked the entire Greenwich Village section and knocked many residents off their feet.

Deputy Fire Chief James H. Quinn said water from a burst 36-inch conduit which itself tied up all subway service on the interborough system's West Side line between Chambers Street and Times Square—a distance of some 3 miles—caused the blast when it struck the hot steam pipe.

Tenants of six remodeled buildings were ordered to leave their homes until the structures could be inspected for possible damage to their supports.

Passengers in some stalled subway trains were forced to wade through 4 feet of water at some points to reach station platforms.

Tokyo, Sept. 10.—Despite the silence maintained by both sides regarding the Roosevelt-Nomura negotiations, the impression is gaining ground here that some progress has been achieved and prospects for avoiding the spread of war to the Pacific are brightening again.

Although the first American reaction to Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye's message to President Roosevelt is believed to have been rather skeptical, the atmosphere surrounding the negotiations is said to have improved since then, and American views conveyed to the Japanese government are no longer finding the outright rejection they did heretofore. The issue is being crystallized sufficiently to hold out promise of another imperial conference to determine a definite policy toward new developments.

Final Touches Given 2d Lend-Lease Bill

War Sidelights

Battle Dead Wash Ashore From Tallinn

Helsinki, Sept. 10 (U.P.).—Thousands of corpses reportedly are being washed ashore daily along the Estonian coast from the direction of Tallinn, grim evidence of the efforts of some 40,000 Soviet troops and civilians to escape from the besieged capital of Estonia.

An observer returning from Tallinn brought the report today, along with an estimate that only 30 per cent of ships loaded to the gunwales escaped the German mines, bombers, artillery and naval units and reached the safety of Leningrad.

The informant said competent sources estimated that between 20,000 and 30,000 men, women and children died during the attempted evacuation of the city in the last days it was under siege.

The observers said the first impression to be had of Tallinn today is one of wholesale destruction. The only buildings in the harbor area escaping destruction were identified as the central customs house and another administration building.

Leningrad Cannon Heard

New York, Sept. 10 (AP).—The British Broacasting Corporation reported today that it had just picked up a Leningrad broadcast in which the booming of cannon and the shouted commands of Russian artillery officers could be heard clearly as a background to the announcers' statement that fighting was continuing. N. B. C. received the B. B. C. broadcast here.

Berlin's Silent Cannon

Berlin, Sept. 10 (AP).—As a result of the latest British raid on Berlin, D. N. B. tonight renewed a warning to civilians to go to their shelters when an alarm sounds and stay there until it is over.

It is a big mistake to assume there is no danger when antiaircraft guns are silent, the news agency said.

"Naturally our antiaircraft gunners are at their posts and fire out of all barrels when enemy planes approach," it said, "but there are occasions when antiaircraft fire remains silent for well-considered reasons."

It did not explain the reasons.

Big Convoy Arrives Safely

London, Sept. 10 (AP).—One of the largest convoys ever to cross the Atlantic recently reached a British port, it was learned on reliable authority tonight, without loss of a single ship or casualty to its escort.

The convoy's gigantic load of freight has been unloaded and dispersed from the port.

French Children Still Lost

Copyright by New York Times

Vichy, France, Sept. 10.—Fifteen months after the great exodus from the north of France before the advancing German armies parents still seek lost children.

On June 10 at Rouen Red Cross nurses found in a train a babe of 2 months all alone. Passengers told how the mother had left her seat at a previous station and how she had fallen on the track when she tried to climb back as the train pulled out. Thanks to descriptions broadcast periodically mother and baby have now been reunited, but there are hundreds of other children still waiting in various other institutions.

Red Military Schools Go On Despite War

By the Associated Press

Moscow, Sept. 10.—Red army military schools are going on with their courses despite war conditions, turning out thousands of young officers to reinforce the front against the Germans,

Correspondents were shown today through the First Moscow Artillery School, where 2000 youths between the ages of 18 and 20 are taking a two-year course to become lieutenants.

The institution is one of Russia's oldest and best, but is only one among many continuing classes normally despite the strain of war.

Squads of students, smartly clad in khaki uniforms, were training on a heavy artillery battery of four 122-millimeter guns on an open range, while bombers and fighter planes flew overhead on practice flights.

Others were studying gunnery, topography, tactics and social sciences in classrooms in a row of red brick buildings. Closely shaven heads bent gravely over books.

The rooms were lined with red banners and portraits of Stalin and his three top field commanders, Marshals Semeon Budyenny, Klementi Voroshilov and Semeon Timoshenko, new heroes of the Soviet Union.

The school's orchestra played successively "The Internationale," "God Save the King" and "The Star-Spangled Banner" as the visit ended.

Report Due Today On Expenditures Under First Act

By James B. Reston.

Copyright by New York Times

High government officials yesterday put the final touches on a second lend-lease bill calling for an appropriation of nearly six billion dollars.

The President's report on the second quarter's operations under House Resolution 1776 showing a "marked improvement" over the rate of expenditures during the first three months of the program will be sent to Capitol Hill today. The Administration's request for Congress' consideration of the supplemental lease-lend appropriation is expected to be sent to Congress tomorrow, the morning after Mr. Roosevelt's speech, or next Monday.

Details of the Administration's requests in the new lease-lend bill are not known. There are reliable reasons for believing, however, that it will call for an appropriation of between $5,900,000,000 and $6,000,000,000. That at least was the plan last night as the document was prepared for the printers. It is generally believed that the new request will be contained in a special message from the White House.

Moreover, as these facts of the new lease-lend program became known, there were sound reasons for stating confidently that this request is not the last, but just the start of a new program of national defense that is just beginning to get under way.

A new and comprehensive conception of the national defense problem is taking shape here. It is fully recognized in the highest quarters that to fulfill the obligations of the Atlantic charter the United States must undertake an industrial program which will dwarf our present efforts. Consequently few honest observers in Washington believe that the planes, guns and tanks manufactured by the six billion dollars of the second lease-lend bill can possibly finish the job the United States has undertaken to do.

["It is reported that complete chaos is developing in the Norwegian civil administration as the result of a German attempt to remove all anti-Nazis from office," Columbia Broadcasting System quoted a report by the British radio.]

(The text of Terboven's decree, as announced in Berlin, said: "After, during the past few days, Communist elements in the trades unions, and particularly among their leaders, by organizing partial strikes, criminally disturbed peaceful work, a civil state of emergency was imposed, effective September 10, at 5 p. m., in the area of Oslo, Aker, Asker and Baerum."

[Berlin said the decree, together with the police order implementing it was blazoned on billboards throughout Oslo. Protection was promised those who obeyed the new regulations.

[Norwegian reports reaching Stockholm said German authorities had confiscated wireless sets at Oslo and other towns, excepting Germans and members of the Vidkun Quisling collaborationist clique. The Germans previously confiscated radio sets in the coastal areas of Norway.

[C. B. S. quoted the British radio as saying Norwegian newspapers reported a big increase in fires this year, particularly in garages housing German military cars and in war factories.]

Russia's Lost Colony

London, Sept. 10 (AP).—The question of what happened to 1800 Russians withdrawn from Spitzbergen after the allied occupation went unanswered today.

The Soviet Embassy spokesman here said he knew nothing of the present movements or whereabouts of the evacuated Russian colony.

[This dispatch gave the first information that the Russian colony had been removed from the Norwegian Arctic Archipelago after Canadian-led allied forces landed to destroy the productive coal mines and took most of the Norwegian population to England.

[It also supports advices that some French refugee soldiers surprisingly found in the far northern islands had been taken to Russia, rather than to England.]

Others asked to attend included Vice President Wallace, chairman of the Supply Priorities and Allocations Board; Senate Majority Leader Barkley, Acting Speaker of the House Woodrum, Chairman Connally, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and Chairman Bloom, of the House Foreign Affairs Committee. Senator Austin, assistant Senate Minority Leader, also was invited but was unable to return in time from his home in Vermont.

The President's speech, already heralded as a firm retort to the Axis sinkings and attack on the U. S. destroyer Greer, was completed last night, but one Capitol source pointed out that there would be ample time to amend it in the light of advice from his leaders.

It was in this connection that modification or repeal of the Neutrality Act was suggested as a possible subject for discussion this morning—a means of opening new aid routes to Russia.

Another was the projected six billion dollar second lend-lease appropriation, estimates on which were due to reach Congress today, together with a report on operations to date under the original seven billion dollar British lend-lease appropriation.

Convoys Mentioned

A third subject speculatively mentioned was the possible escorting or convoying of American ships taking the Red Sea route to the Near East, in addition to arming of merchantmen.

Congressional sentiment was divided on possible public reaction to any immediate move to lay aside Neutrality Act restrictions. But one veteran legislator, schooled in vote trends, expressed belief that the Senate would approve with no more than 37 dissenting votes, and the House would give a slightly wider margin of approval than it gave the narrowly passed Selective Service Act extension.

Some others dismissed the suggestion as altogether unlikely, citing the controversy it would certainly arouse.

One member, prominent in foreign affairs councils at the Capitol pointed out that the 1939 act adopted in advance of lend-lease policies operates mainly in the interest of the Axis.

Modification of its war zone provisions might speed assistance to Russia over shorter aid routes to Murmansk and Archangel, he noted. It was argued in this quarter that if Germany is to loose unrestricted submarine warfare in American-patrolled seas, war zones would lose their original meaning anyway.

Defenseless Ships

Another Neutrality Act restriction which leaves American merchantmen operating outside the war defenseless against Axis attack is the section prohibiting merchant vessels from carrying any arms and ammunition except those needed to maintain discipline.

Significance was attached to the White House decision to call legislators of both parties into conference. On matters concerning broadening of naval patrol movements, or orders to shoot at the first hostile move by an Axis ship, believed the original subject of the President's speech, he already has full power to proceed. But any basic neutrality act change would require legislation.

Rayburn's call for Congress to return added drama to the move, but Acting Speaker Woodrum denied knowledge of the subject matter of the conference and produced Rayburn's telegram dealing mainly with the pending tax bill.

"If conference report on tax bill can be reported next week, I think that it should be acted on immediately," Rayburn wired. "Wish also to say to press that I think it advisable for all men to return to Washington early next week."

'Force for Force' Speech by President Awaited

Department underscored the dangers to shipping on the high seas by releasing statements of survivors who declared that the American-owned Sessa, sunk off Iceland, and that the Steel Seafarer, bombed in the Red Sea, had been sent to the bottom without warning and under cover of darkness.

Whether or not he asks for new legal authority, the President was expected to deliver a "force for force" answer to the latest series of submarine and dive-bomber attacks on American shipping.

He was counted on for words that will make good his recent pledge to keep open the sea lanes to Iceland. On these very sea lanes within recent weeks the United States destroyer Greer engaged in a torpedo-depth bomb duel with a German U-boat, and the American-owned Sessa, flying a Panama flag, was sunk by a torpedo with the loss of 24 lives, including one American.

The impasse with Germany hinges on the fact that Berlin asserts the right to sink any ships that enter a zone which Germany has declared to be a blockade area, while President Roosevelt refuses to recognize the validity of the Nazi-proclaimed blockade. In Mr. Roosevelt's view a blockade, to have standing under international law, must be effective, and sporadic raids by lone U-boats do not constitute an effective blockade.

The President might also make some reference, it was believed, to the delicate negotiations in progress with Japan to preserve peace in the Pacific. Their delicacy is such, however, that officials said they would not be surprised if Japan were passed over in silence.

Hopkins on Train

As the President sped toward Washington to make his address, two of his closest advisers boarded the Presidential train at New York City. They were Hopkins, and Judge Samuel I. Rosenman, of New York, author of the recent defense reorganization plan and often a collaborator on Presidential speeches.

Hopkins, it was said, wanted to bring the President up to date on recent moves in the program of lease-lend aid to Great Britain, Russia and China, while Rosenman was said to be carrying a new plan for further tightening of the domestic defense structure.

The State Department disclosed late yesterday that survivors of the Sessa told their Navy rescuers that their 1900-ton freighter was torpedoed without warning and in light conditions described as "deep twilight," so dark that, according to the ship's mate, the submarine "could not have seen ship's markings."

Testimony from survivors cabled by the American consul at Reykjavik, Bertel E. Kuniholm, described a scene of disaster and sudden death 300 miles southwest of Iceland.

Vessel Shelled

The ship was struck by a torpedo and then by two shells, sinking in two minutes. This probably accounted for the fact that 24 of the crew of 27 were lost. Six men reached a life raft, but three of them died.

The three survivors were picked up by the U. S. S. Lansdale after a three-week ordeal at sea. Those saved were H. K. Bjerregaard, 37, chief mate, a Dane; G. L. T. (Gote) Ljunggren, 32, able seaman, of Sweden, and J. de Olivefra Correia, 25, able seaman, of Portugal.

The text of the State Department's announcement of the details received from Reykjavik follows:

"The American consul at Reykjavik, Mr. Bertel E. Kuniholm, reports that survivors of the S. S. Sessa state that the Sessa was running darkened with dimmed navigational lights when struck at 10 p. m. ship's time by torpedo. Survivors describe light conditions as deep twilight. Mate thinks visibility was so low that submarine could not have seen ship's markings.

"Ship struck by torpedo starboard side just forward bridge. Listed to starboard, sinking almost immediately. Two shells fired, one striking bridge probably killing captain, third mate and quartermaster, other striking bunkerhouse. Submarine not seen nor did survivors see gunfire flashes. Forward raft probably destroyed by torpedo explosion. No chance use lifeboats. Six men reached after raft by swimming. Two Portuguese and one Canadian died on raft. Survivors saw no other boats or rafts and were unable to reach other seaman in water.

Meanwhile, the State Department received further details of the sinking of the Steel Seafarer September 5 in the Red Sea, an American freighter loaded with lend-lease supplies for the British.

A preliminary report from the master of the vessel, Capt. John D. Halliday, of Baltimore, said that the first warning of the attack came when the aircraft was heard, and two seconds later there were two explosions on the starboard side of the vessel. No flames were seen, he said.

The plane, Halliday said, flew low over the ship from starboard to port with the engines shut off, the ship took a list to port, he reported, and then to starboard before it settled and sank quickly by the stern.

The wireless was put out of action almost immediately, he said.

The captain said boats were launched with the crew and were in the water within five minutes and had just pulled clear from the ship when she sank.

Boats Separated

The boats made for Shadwan Island, 12½ miles from the scene. One boat became separated owing to the wind and the rough sea. After repairs were made two boat loads of survivors proceeded to Hrghada to report the sinking.

Captain Halliday said yesterday in a radio interview from Cairo, Egypt, that the vessel was bombed "with the Stars and Stripes flying."

In a broadcast carried by the National Broadcasting Company Blue Network, the ship's master declared there could not have been any doubt of its nationality because "it was a clear moonlight night and not a cloud in the sky."

Laval Assassin Declared Sane

Proof of U. S. Ultimatum To Japan Claimed in London

United Press Staff Correspondent.

London, Sept. 10.—Foreign diplomats here told the United Press today they now have confirmation of reports that the United States has warned Japan against attempting any northward expansion at the expense of Russia and described the move as "the most valuable aid so far given Moscow by any of the democracies."

Washington, it was said, has informed Tokyo that any new Japanese moves either northward or southward would result in intensified United States pressure upon Nippon.

The warning, according to the informants, apparently was delivered in the early stages of the current Japanese-American negotiations which started about three weeks ago.

The implications of the warning, it was said, went far beyond an expression of American determination to deliver war supplies to the Soviet port of Vladivostok through Japanese-controlled waters.

President Roosevelt, the informants said, made it amply clear to Admiral Kichisaburo Nomura, the Japanese Ambassador in Washington, that the United States would not countenance any Japanese moves into Russian-controlled territory or into Thailand or the Netherlands East Indies.

The effect of the warning thus was to tell the Japanese that their expansion must stop.

In line with American efforts to prevent Japanese expansion from getting out of bounds, it was recalled that the late President Theodore Roosevelt, in arranging the Portsmouth Treaty of 1905 which ended the Russo-Japanese War, was said to have been motivated in part by a desire to prevent Japan from becoming too big.

Later, during another Republican administration, Secretary of State Charles Evans Hughes, at the 1921 Washington Conference insisted that Japan evacuate the half of northern Saghalien Island and the Russian maritime provinces, which were restored to the Soviet government. The Japanese finally withdrew in 1922.

It has been expected for a fortnight that Britain will give a similar warning to Japan against northward or southward expansion, it was said, but so far London has not gone beyond Prime Minister Winston Churchill's public statement that Japanese moves southward must cease.

Rain, Raids Fail to Block Burma Road

By F. Tillman Durdin
Copyright by New York Times

Lashio, Burma, Sept. 10.—The Burma Road is a going concern. This correspondent has just traveled its tortuous 600-mile length from Kunming to the Burma border, and has found the road is taking the heavy wet season traffic with its capacity only moderately affected by the daily sweep of monsoon torrents and sporadic Japanese air raiding.

Authorities said the highway was having its best month since January, and this in spite of the rains, with 4,000 trucks, mostly American models, grinding up into China carrying supplies for the Chinese war machine. Vital Salween and Mekong bridges are both in good shape, undamaged by recent Japanese bombings. The exact Burma Road tonnage these days is a military secret, but it can be said the cargoes that crossed the Burma border into China were well above 15,000 tons last month.

Recent tonnage reports are proving the highway has now been improved to the point where it has become an all-weather road, capable of accommodating almost as much cargo during the six months' rains as during the dry period. This writer saw many landslides and many trucks that had come to grief on muddy stretches, but gangs of workmen, often hill tribes people, were keeping the highway open by means of quick repairs, while traffic rolled past the casualties of the trail.

The Chinese, Malayans, Burmese, Indians, Americans and Frenchmen comprising a majority of the Burma road chauffeurs have become probably the world's best mountain road drivers. They know each other's habits so well that their horns are seldom sounded, and there are few tricks to truck handling that are not second nature to them. Hard-driving, they work and sleep in their vehicles during the seven days it usually takes to cover road and then, arrived at the terminal ports of Kunming or Lashio, they relieve the strain with a rip-roaring night in town.

To a first-timer over the Burma Road it seems the route has never been adequately described. Built as it was almost entirely by hand labor, the road is a staggering achievement and without doubt the greatest highway construction feat of modern times. It twists over seemingly impassable 8000-foot mountains and finds its way miraculously through 3000-foot gorges. At places the road has been literally chiseled into the face of sheer mountainside, and one looks up at a roof of rock above and down 2000 feet to the bottom of a canyon below. The Southern section runs through the worst malarial jungles in the world.

Administration of the road is still characterized by much inefficiency and profiteering. But reforms are now coming swiftly. Somewhat bruised by the investigational sweep along the road of Daniel Arnstein and his mission, officials were plugging hard at the job of improving traffic management and stepping up tonnage.

Major Reynolds Condon, United States Army officer, has taken over the assignment of working out a system of policing the road, and James Wilson, veteran New York State truck operator, is expected at Kunming soon to handle truck operations and maintenance. They are the vanguard of upward of 50 Americans who will soon be at work on the road.

Drums of American asphalt were to be seen alongside the highway all the way from Kunming to Burma, ready for surfacing due to begin at the end of the rainy season. Down near the Burma border the writer saw rolling tentatively into China on their first trip convoy after convoy of new American six-wheel Army trucks.

With thousands more of these and other types due to go into service within the next few months, authorities foresee that the Burma Road by the year's end will carry monthly shipments in excess of 30,000 tons.

Bombers Swarm Over Calais, Boulogne Areas

By International News Service

London (Thursday), Sept. 11.—Royal Air Force bombers, grounded for 24 hours by bad weather, resumed their offensive last night and early today with successive flights across the English Channel to the Calais and Boulogne sections of the German-occupied French coast.

Residents of England's southeast coast saw the familiar flashes of antiaircraft cannonading shooting up from the other side of the Channel, and heard the rumble of bomb explosions.

Squadron after squadron of R. A. F. bombers, beginning shortly after nightfall Wednesday, droned eastward to the continent in what appeared to be another night of widespread raids against German centers.

The air ministry, meanwhile, reported an R. A. F. formation, including torpedo planes, Wednesday staged a long-distance daylight assault on a Nazi convoy off the Norwegian coast. A supply ship in the convoy, said the communique, was hit with an aerial torpedo and brought to a standstill, enveloped in smoke.

Fighter squadrons, meanwhile, darted across the Channel in the afternoon and raked German big gun positions on the French coast with machin gun fire. No losses in the daylight operations were reported by the air ministry.

Greece, Crete Bombed

Cairo, Egypt, Sept. 10 (AP).—British air raids on Axis-conquered Greece and the Island of Crete were reported by the R. A. F. Middle East headquarters today.

Its communique said that considerable damage apparently was caused on both banks of the Corinth Canal, which makes the Peloponnesus an island off the Greek mainland, and that the Candia airport on German-held Crete was also bombed.

Two Ships in Suez Hit

Berlin, Sept. 10 (AP).—Two more merchantmen have been damaged in the Suez Canal by German air assaults, the high command reported today.

A bomb hit, it said, was scored on a freighter in Great Bitter Lake, part of the canal system, and another merchant ship damaged in the Gulf of Suez below the canal.

Both attacks were made Monday night when German raiders also attacked the canal zone airport of Abu Seir, the communique said.

Hoover Says Story Of FBI Shakeup Is 'Fantastic'

A news dispatch from New York reporting that more than 250 Federal Bureau of Investigation agents had been discharged or transferred in a Nation-wide shakeup was described as "fantastic" last night by Department of Justice officials.

Ugo Carusi, executive assistant to the Attorney General, and J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the FBI, made this official comment: "The story is so fantastic that it doesn't merit denial."

Similar comment came from B. E. Sackett, agent in charge of the New York FBI office, but he acknowledged that "two or three agents" there had been discharged recently for personal misconduct. The dispatch named three agents and said they were dismissed for "associating with a person or persons prejudicial to the best interests of the bureau."

Sackett also confirmed the dispatch's assertion that Paula von Luckner, who claims to be a cousin of Germany's famous World War raider, Count Felix von Luckner, was being held on charges of impersonating a Federal officer.

Gen. Chiang Hopes U. S. Won't Relax Pressure on Japan

Copyright By the United Press

Chungking, Sept. 10.—The Chinese government "hopes and believes" that, while China is continuing her fight against Japan, the United States and other countries friendly to China will intensify their economic pressure upon Nippon or at least not relax it in any way, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek said today in an interview.

The general pledged his government to continue the "war of resistance against Japan to the bitter end" and implied that American economic sanctions upon Japan, as imposed by President Roosevelt, may be a decisive factor in the struggle.

Referring to Washington's continuous "short-of-war" pressure upon Tokyo, he said that this program "should be, and I trust is, the bond of understanding which binds all nations interested in Pacific Ocean affairs and committed to the general policy of opposition to aggression."

"For more than four years China has resisted Japanese aggression," the general continued. "Japan was the first nation to disturb world peace in the present era. She still is striving and scheming to complete her aggressive designs."

A Cause for Joy

He pondered a moment before he went on and then said slowly:

"But we know that the fighting strength of the Japanese now is diminishing. The weakening of their effort is everywhere perceptible. And"—here the general broke into a rare and broad smile—"Japanese arrogance also is beginning to disappear."

Asked what had caused the weakening of the Japanese war effort against this country, the general replied:

"Two factors are largely responsible for the situation confronting Japan today. First, China's strong and continued resistance has thrown the whole Japanese program out of gear. Second, economic sanctions, enforced under the leadership of the United States, which set a general example by freezing Japan's assets and embargoing the shipment of war materials to that country, have proved to the Japanese people the weakness of their whole economic position.

"It is evident that a prime object of Japan's present diplomatic moves is to bring about a cessation of the war with China, so that the so-called 'China incident' can be liquidated. This must be done because of American economic pressure upon Japan and Tokyo's need to restore trade relations with the democratic powers."

"Practice of Alternating"

He warned "those who have short memories to recall that since the invasion of Manchuria in 1931 the Japanese government, in furthering its national policy, has employed the practice of alternating between a show of conciliation and open intimidation."

"On numerous occasions in the past," Chiang said, "both the Chinese government and the American Administration has been duped by Japanese trickery."

"But," he added, "I now am confident that the governments of all nations friendly to China will show they have benefitted by their painful past experiences with Japan and will not permit themselves again to be lulled into a transitory sense of false security."

Gestapo Forced Him to Spy, Witness Says

By W. W. Chaplin
International News Service Staff Writer

New York, Sept. 10.—William G. Sebold, German machine gunner of the first World War who is now a naturalized American, told at the current spy trial today how Nazi Gestapo agents "cornered" him and forced him to accept an assignment to spy on the American national defense program.

He took the assignment and then signed up with the Federal Bureau of Investigation headed by J. Edgar Hoover and outwitted the Gestapo.

Under cross examination as star Government witness at the trial of 16 alleged spies in German pay, Sebold denied that he went to Germany in 1939 in hopes of peddling American defense secrets.

"I was threatened," he said, in telling of demands Gestapo agents made on him. "They had me in a corner."

One of the defense lawyers asked if Sebold then agreed to be a German spy.

"Sure, wouldn't you?" the witness asked.

Sebold said he explained his predicament to the American consul at Cologne, who merely told him:

"You're in a bad spot, but I can't help you."

When he later reported that he was being shadowed by the Gestapo, he said the consul told him:

"That's too bad. You'd better beat it."

When he returned to America in the spring of last year, however, the FBI took him more seriously, putting him on the G-men's payroll at $50 a week and giving careful study to all his instructions from the Gestapo.

He turned over to the FBI $910 left of $1,000 given him by the Gestapo for his expenses and to set up a short wave radio spy station, he said, and the American agents actually used part of the money to set up a station at Centerport, Long Island, capable of communicating with Germany.

An FBI agent was placed in the station as operator and to date, Sebold said, between 200 and 300 messages have passed through the station—"phoney" information about the American defense program to delude the Gestapo, and important information in return from the Gestapo, all of which went into FBI files.

These messages, it was reported today, are to be placed in evidence as the trial progresses.

Defense attorneys attempted to discredit Sebold's testimony by asking him about a six weeks' period he spent in Bellevue Hospital here, especially noted for its psychopathic ward. The witness said his only connection with the psychopathic department of the hospital was in connection with a general checkup which resulted in his being operated on for stomach ulcers.

Britain Gives Assurance Lease-Lend Goods Will Not Be Used to Bolster Its World Trade

By the Associated Press

London, Sept. 10.—The British government, moving to spike what was unofficially termed a German propaganda campaign to promote distrust over operations of the Lease-Lend Act, assured the United States today it would make certain that American goods were not used to bolster or extend British world trade at the expense of the United States business.

This was done in a white paper, accompanied by an official statement of the British Board of Trade, which was described by a reliable informant as but one in a number of actions prepared "to prevent Germany from using lease-lend grumbling as the thin edge of a wedge to pry Britain and the United States apart and hamper the Allied war effort."

Already, he said, unfounded allegations were being spread here that the United States was trying to use lease-lend to keep Britain from exporting anything so that American exporters could steal British foreign markets, while in the United States the story went to the effect that Britain was accepting lease-lend goods and at the same time sending British goods to South America to steal United States trade.

Exports Have Declined

"Actually," he added, "our exports to South America have fallen off considerably, but the service departments won't let us give figures because they might give too much information to German sea raiders."

[In Washington, Secretary of State Hull said the assurance by the British government that it would not use lend-lease supplies to extend British export trade simply put in writing what had been agreed to by Britain and the United States.

[The policy statement, he told his press conference, does not contain anything very new, or which would change materially the existing situation. He added it might, however, serve to correct some of the misunderstandings and misinterpretations which he said had resulted from the extent and nature of the Lend-Lease Act.—Editor's note.]

These were the principal undertakings made to the United States in the white paper:

"Lease-Lend materials sent to this country (Britain) have not been used for export and every effort will be made in the future to insure that they are not used for export, subject to the principle that where complete physical segregation of lend-lease materials is impracticable, domestic consumption of the material in question shall be at least equal to the amounts received under lend-lease.

"His Majesty's government have not applied, and will not apply, any materials similar to those supplied under lend-lease in such a way as to enable their exporters to enter new markets or to extend their export trade at the expense of United States exporters. Owing to the need to devote all available capacity and manpower to war production, the United Kingdom export trade is restricted to the irreducible minimum necessary to supply or obtain materials essential to the war effort."

As to distribution in the United Kingdom of lend-lease goods:

"The general principle followed in this matter is that the remuneration received by the distributors, whatever the method of distribution, is controled and will be no more than a fair return for the services rendered . . . The arrangement rigorously exclude any opportunity for a speculative profit by private interests from dealing in lend-lease goods.

". . . The justification for retaining existing channels of distribution operating under strict government control is that the creation of elaborate new organizations in their place would inevitably result in loss of efficiency and the masterful use of manpower, and retard the war effort."

Storm Delays Search for Lost Army Bomber

Tacoma, Wash., Sept. 10 (AP).—Because of bad weather, all aerial and land parties were recalled today from the search for a missing twin-motored Army bomber and its crew of six.

Seven Army planes returned to McChord Field air base just in time to miss a terrific thunderstorm. Land parties also returned from the Cascade Mountain area east of Seattle.

Nothing was sighted and no reports found on the bomber which vanished yesterday morning while on a routine training flight.

SPAB Calls For Defense Inventory

tempo of defense effort:

4. The OPM announced a reshuffling of commodity branches, including the transfer of the automotive and transportation equipment branch and the electrical products and consumers' durable goods branch to the Office of Civilian Supply, headed by Leon Henderson.

Significance of the move was seen in the fact that Henderson, now given control over the fields of autos, radios, washing machines, refrigerators, etc., has long insisted that production of these items be drastically curtailed, to free critical and scarce materials for defense needs. His insistence provoked a conflict with other OPM officials who had been hesitant to make the severe cuts. Yesterday's reshuffling resolves the conflict in favor of the "all-out for defense" faction.

5. Federal Loan Administrator Jesse H. Jones announced that financial arrangements had been made for the construction and operation of two new magnesium plants and one new aluminum plant. The two former operations will have an annual capacity of 112 million pounds of the vital metal needed in airplanes and incendiary bombs, bringing total American production up to 274 million pounds.

More Aluminum Output

The new aluminum plant, to be built near Tacoma, Wash., will provide 30 million pounds a year. Jones said this would bring the nation's capacity to 1,130,000,000 pounds, as against a goal of 1,500,000,000 pounds which he hopes to have in production within the next year or 15 months.

The listing of the Nation's civilian and defense requirements has long been proposed as an essential to proper planning. Lack of such a survey, critics of the defense program have argued, has been responsible for past failures to provide sufficient raw materials and machines to meet the threat of Axis production.

Step to Coordination

In calling for the survey, the SPAB said it "followed the view that there must be one authority to develop the official requirement figures, . . . holding that there would be confusion otherwise, because the several parts of the requirement picture must be developed by separate agencies.

Inferring that it was assuming the role of over-all planning agency, the SPAB said it ordered the listing of needs to launch "detailed planning of America's defense program on a basis of accurate, coordinated knowledge of all the Nation's requirements."

The program calls for "a detailed outlining of both civilian and military needs, including procurement schedules for Army, Navy and Air Force items, and including also such goods as are to go abroad under the lease-lend and defense aid programs, "and also for a breakdown of the production schedules and statement of civilian requirements into schedules of raw materials, labor and machinery needed for their production.

Seen Step to Expansion

Hitherto, OPM and other defense agencies have complained that there was no centralized location where all requiremtns were scheduled, and also that difficulty had been experienced in obtaining requirements from the service organizations.

For this reason, it is believed, inadequate programs for the expansion of raw materials and failure to "broaden the base" of manufacture by using additional industrial plants have followed.

Launching of the requirements study represents a victory for Nelson, who has long insisted that there should be a civilian planning board operating on the basis of complete information on future needs

The SPAB's policy to curtail plant expansion for civilian items was established in a temporary denial of a proposal to enlarge the plant of the Tennessee Eastman Corp., at Kingsport, Tenn., where plastics are manufactured.

Admitting that construction of the vetoed plant would have provided plastics which might have replaced eight million pounds of aluminum, 18 million pounds of chrome nickel plated steel, six million pounds of stainless steel and 34 million pounds of zinc, the SPAB held its immediate construction was not desirable because:

1. The construction of the plant would have required large amounts of critical materials, including stainless steel, which was inadvisable in view of "an expected early winter increase in demand for nickel for armor plate and ordnance items"; and

2. "Hundreds of similar applications are on hand and no single one can properly be granted until it is known how much of a drain on scarce materials would be involved in granting all of them."

The temporary decision to prevent expansion and the launching of the inventory of requirements were seen last night as being linked together. Until the SPAB has a clear view of all military needs of critical materials and machines, and is able to compare total demands with available supply, it presumably will not permit further drain on these materials.

Big Naval Promotion List Wins Roosevelt's Approval

BEARDALL SMITH SHAFROTH ROCKWELL

KAUFMAN KINKAID FURER PURNELL

WILKINSON BRUCE LEE HUSTVEDT

President Roosevelt yesterday approved the recommendations of a Navy selection board advancing 12 captains to rear admiral and 147 commanders to captain, probably the largest list of promotions to high naval rank since the World War.

Five of those selected for promotion to rear admiral and 21 chosen for captain are on duty here at the Navy Department. Others hold important sea commands or administrative posts at Navy yards and stations. All will be promoted in coming months as vacancies occur or new jobs are authorized in the expanding Navy.

Capt. John R. Beardall, aide to President Roosevelt, was selected for rear admiral. Others here chosen for that rank were Capt. John F. Shafroth, jr., assistant chief of the bureau of navigation and until recently director of naval reserve personnel; Capt. Julius A. Furer, senior member of the Navy Compensation Board; Capt. Bryson Bruce, administrative officer of the Bureau of Ships, and Capt. Willis A. Lee, jr., director of the division of fleet training.

'All Out' War Includes Flood Of Poison Gas, Gen. Porter Says

By the Associated Press

Atlantic City, Sept. 10.—Maj. Gen. William N. Porter, chief of the United States Chemical Warfare Service, predicted tonight the present Europan war "will never be really 'all out' until poison gases once more flood the battlefields."

Speaking at the American Chemical Society's annual banquet, Gen. Porter asserted the only reason the Axis powers had not used poison gas already was because they didn't think it to their advantage.

"Whether or not gas warfare will be used," he said, "depends solely on whether Hitler's generals feel that the advantage to them would surely outweigh any disadvantages.

"Up until now they have not felt so, and I think rightly, since gas is primarily a defensive weapon and would have been of much more value to the retiring Russians than to the advancing Germans. Hitler understands well that mustard gas on British beaches would add materially to the precariousness of an invasion.

"But should he believe that one gigantic stroke with gas would win the war for him, I am convinced he would use it without question. Treaties signed and sealed have not restrained dictators from any course of action suited to their purpose. This war will never be really 'all out' until poison gases once more flood the battlefields."

Gen. Porter observed Italy did not hesitate to use mustard gas "on the unprotected Ethiopians" to bring the first Abyssinian campaign to a sudden end, and added: "You can be certain that neither Hitler nor Mussolini have forgotten this."

"Wars are not won by gas masks or their defensive material," concluded Gen. Porter. "To overcome the enemy we must take the offensive.

"I believe the word 'defense' has actually hindered our military preparations. If we are to carry out the declared purpose of our Commander-in-Chief (President Roosevelt) and crush Hitlerism, no amount of defensive preparations can do the job.

"Only an Army organized as a striking force can build a true and disciplined morale. Defense is a negative word, an insincere word, and no word at all around which to rally a military effort. It has its place in any military vocabulary but we have endowed it in this country with connotations which make it a weasel word."

Conferees Seek Speedy Accord On Tax Bill

A House and Senate conference committee, shooting at a full agreement on the tax bill this week, yesterday raced through noncontroversial Senate changes without a single major decision.

By conference agreement, disputed items were passed over until today, when the Senate's lowering of individual income tax exemptions to $750 for single persons and $1500 for married is expected to be first up for a test.

A sign that no existing conflict will be permitted to stand in the way of final passage next week was seen in the call by House leaders for members to return early next week, prepared for immediate tax bill action.

Acting House Speaker Woodrum was advised that the bill will be ready for conference report by Tuesday.

Secrecy attended the opening session, Chairman George, of the Finance Committee, and Chairman Doughton, of the Ways and Means Committee, pointing out that the conferences were informal and no decisions could be announced until House conferees are formally appointed when the House resumes business Monday.

Several members of the House conference group were reported working for a compromise in Senate base-broadening provisions that that would soften the burden passed on by the move to persons making moderate incomes.

Another fight impends on the Senate's raising of House corporation surtax proposals from 5 to 6 per cent on companies earnings up to $25,000 and 6 to 7 per cent on companies making over that figure.

Several Senate excise tax charges will encounter brisk conference opposition, including the raise from 5 to 10 per cent in the tax on local telephone calls and the sharp Senate step-up in wine rates.

mained open, theaters were crowded and 60 per cent of the Kiev Province wheat crop was stored. Sowing of winter wheat was said to have been started.

The siege of Odessa went into its second month with sailors of the Black Sea fleet reporting continued counterattacks against the Rumanians.

The publication Red Fleet reported that the Russian navy had successfully escorted a large convoy into port after an encounter with German bombers in "one of the greatest" air versus sea battles of the war.

Germans were said to have attacked the warships in a heavy sea 50 miles outside the port but two waves of planes failed to find their targets and were repulsed by anti-aircraft fire. More than 40 bombs were said to have been dropped in vain around a single destroyer.

The army newspaper Red Star said in its report of the counter-attack across the River "N" that "almost 4000 German soldiers and officers found their graves in the waters of the river."

Several German dvisions retreating across the river were said to have lost 238 tanks, 50 planes, 486 trucks and 135 guns. The staff of the motorized Fifteenth Regiment was said to have been routed and 12 officers killed.

All three counterattacks were said to be continuing and calls were broadcast for new guerrilla attacks behind the German lines. Soviet planes dropped 20 million leaflets behind the lines in a series of propaganda flights.

The Russians said that in the first days of German occupation of western White Russia and the western Ukraine guerrilla companies arose. These now are reported to have been grouped into "formidable battalions" ready to pounce upon German supply trains.

The official accounts also take pains to mention that the Red air force cooperates constantly with the tank units.

derous shells start on their mission of distant destruction. Technical details of the guns and their exact location were not disclosed.

Strong Fight Admitted

With its problems thus multiplying, Leningrad nevertheless was declared to be putting up a strong fight.

The Russians' last resort in their grudging retreat was to leave thousands of land mines, Germans said.

A military spokesman said the Leningrad operations had trapped a number of Russian warships in the Baltic by blocking the Stalin canal route to the Arctic. He gave the strength of the Soviet Baltic fleet as 2 battleships, 6 cruisers, 30 destroyers, 100 submarines, 50 minesweepers, 12 torpedo boats and numerous minelayers and auxiliary vessels.

South of Lake Ilmen, which is southeast of Leningrad, the Germans claimed 15 Russian tanks were smashed in a drive to clean up an outlying field position.

From the far southern front came reports of continuing air raids on besieged Odessa. Several thousand additional Russians have been taken prisoner, and German artillery has sunk a transport loaded with Russian troops on the lower Dnieper River east of Kherson, it was declared.

Air Activity Reported Intense

Artillery duels between shore guns and monitors were reported all along the river clear up to Kiev.

On the central front, D. N. B. said the Soviets supported by tanks attacked German positions 37 miles northeast of Smolensk throughout Monday to Tuesday, but were routed "with bloody losses."

At another unnamed point the agency claimed the 300th Russian Infantry Division suffered especially heavy losses, with one of its regiments reduced to a fighting strength of only five officers and 120 men.

[There was scanty news from the central area, but the Berlin radio quoted "competent quarters" as claiming capture of Vyazma, 36 miles east of Smolensk and 130 miles west of Moscow.]

Dispatches concerning intense air activity on the EasternFront brought into prominence the name of Maj. Gotthardt Handrick, who was an Olympic Games pentathlon winner. The air squadron he commands has destroyed 500 Russian planes, dispatches said.

In the West, D.N.B. said the British had lost 1,200 planes between June 22 and September 9.

No reference was made at the concluding Senate hearing to action of the Supply Priorities and Allocations Board on Tuesday in denying steel plates for construction of an 80-million-dollar pipeline from Texas to New Jersey.

Reaction among New York oil men to the SPAB decision was varied yesterday, the Associated Press reported. Some viewed it as calamitous, others were gratified and still others dismissed it as "a political gesture which may be reversed or modified."

New System Delays Billing for Water Fees

The District is about a month behind in mailing out annual water bills because a new electric billing system has been installed to speed up work.

That, in effect, was the explanation yesterday as to why residents of certain sections of the city have failed to receive payment notices.

Until this year, all water bills were made out by hand. It was a tedious practice, so the electric system was set up. Parts of the new procedure are still in the process of being installed and clerks are not yet used to the intricate devices used.

As a consequence, a water department spokesman said, some citizens must wait a while longer for their bills. There is no danger of cutting of supplies and everything should be back to normal by the end of this month, it was added.

Annexation Plan Backed by Capper

Would Cede to D. C. Federally-Owned Arlington Area

Senator Arthur Capper (Republican) of Kansas, ranking minority member of the District Committee, last night backed up the contention of Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat) of Nevada, committee chairman, that Federal lands in Arlington County, Va., should be annexed for the District.

"I am for it," declared Capper when asked how he stood on the proposal. "As I understand it, the main purpose is to get the airport and other Federal properties adjacent to the District within the jurisdiction of the Capital.

"The airport at Gravelly Point is a national airport and most certainly should be within the exclusive control of the District. I hope Senator McCarran's efforts in this direction prosper, and I shall be glad to support him in every way I can."

Following a conference with President Roosevelt last week, McCarran announced that he had been asked by Mr. Roosevelt to make a study to determine how Federal property in Arlington may be returned to the District by legislative action. McCarran originally proposed to recapture all of the 30 square miles of the original District that Congress retroceded to Virginia in 1846. With the President's approval, he now hopes to bring within the District all Federally owned lands contiguous to the Capital. He has directed Renah F. Camalier, committee adviser, to make an exhaustive study of the problem.

Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, acting House speaker in the absence of Speaker Rayburn, told questioners yesterday that he had given Senator McCarran's proposal "no serious thought" and had considered it as chiefly "something to occupy space in the newspapers."

"Anyway," Woodrum added, "the property in question is in Judge Smith's district (the Virginia District of Representative Howard Smith) and I haven't seen him get very excited about it."

"That's all right, but it may be in Uncle Sam's District," commented McCarran.

Unit Leaves Meade for War Games

By the Associated Press

Fort George G. Meade, Md., Sept. 10.—A convoy of 70 trucks will leave Fort Meade tomorrow morning, carrying 400 Regular Army men of the Sixty-fourth Signal Battalion to Morven, N. C., site of the coming First Army war games.

Post headquarters officers said one company of the battalion left for the training area about a month ago to lay the groundwork for a communications system which will be completed by the unit leaving tomorrow.

Officers estimated the mechanized march will keep the men on the road three days and two nights.

School Board Acts On 1-Cent Milk

out those schools where the smallest amount of milk, in proportion to enrollment, is served. Such schools, also, must meet the economic requirements: At least 65 per cent of the pupils must be dependent on WPA, public or private relief or from families in the "lowest third" income level.

For example, ten schools may be selected in which there is an aggregate enrollment of 5000 pupils. Suppose that 1000 of them got milk to drink last term, either through the WPA free school lunch program or by buying it (at 5 cents a bottle) or receiving it free under auspices of the Parent-Teacher Association mid-morning snack project.

In this group of schools, a 400 per cent increase in consumption would be possible—well in excess of the 270 per cent required for the institution of a 1-cent milk program. Therefore, they would be eligible, provided, of course, they qualified on the economic count.

Last spring School Superintendent Frank W. Ballou submitted to the Surplus Marketing Administration a tentative list of 39 elementary schools. While all 39 are undoubtedly qualified, as far as the low income rule is concerned, the fact that they are incapable of producing a 270 per cent consumption increase rules them out as a solid group.

The research committee should find it relatively simple to boil down this list to satisfy the Federal requirement on consumption.

Funds for purchase of this milk, at a penny a half-pint, are available in the District's appropriation for the current fiscal year. It could be handled, according to officials, without interfering with the purchase of milk for the WPA school lunch program.

While the public schools and the District nutrition committee, which has named a special committee to collaborate with the group to be nominated by Haycock, are working toward a penny milk project in the schools, several juvenile service agencies are seeking to ascertain their eligibility to participate.

Max Farrington, executive director of the Metropolitan Police Boys Clubs, yesterday declared that the question would be considered Monday night at a meeting of directors of the five affiliated clubs. The organization has a membership of 16,500 youths, the great majority of whom are in families subsisting on low incomes, if not on public relief or charity.

great struggle by the movie magnates for freedom of speech."

"There are a great many naive souls," he continued, "who think that speech is free so long as political authority—the Government—does not shackle it. They overlook the fact that there can be such a thing as the denial of speech when one individual or small collection of individuals can band together and get control of the instruments of speech and deny them to everybody but themselves."

Cites Revenge Motif

"Five major companies and three satellite corporations" control the production and exhibition of movies, he said, and these organizations, in turn, are controlled by five or six men "dominated by hatred and determined to wreak vengeance on Adolf Hitler."

This handful of executives, he charged, "have decided to undertake to mold the foreign policy of the United States Government."

As members of this group he named Nicholas Schenck, of Loew's; the Warner brothers, "who probably have made more of these hate-producing films than any other company in America;" Darryl Zanuck, of Twentieth Century-Fox; Alexander Korda, of United Artists, and Henry Luce, magazine publisher who controls "The March of Time."

Charges Foreign Policy Fight

Willkie, in his last press release of the day, asserted that neither Clark nor Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, who testified Tuesday, "has presented an iota of evidence that would stand up in a court." Clark and Nye are authors of the resolution calling for the inquiry into allegations that the movies and radio are being used to involve the United States in war.

"All that they have said, in effect, is that they oppose the United States foreign policy, and that men who do not agree with them are neither men of good will nor of integrity," Willkie declared. "And that some of the men who disagree with them are the executives of the motion picture industry."

The film industry counsel said the demand of Clark and Nye for the investigation "shields a desire to use the prerogatives of a Senate committee to fight a rear-guard action against a foreign policy which the Senate, as a whole, has overwhelmingly approved."

Willkie, in an earlier statement, accused Nye of a "fanciful concoction" in asserting that the Federal Government had given orders to Hollywood as to the nature of pictures it should produce.

Proof Lacking, Willkie Says

"Senator Nye obviously had no proof," Willkie said, "but he did mention Lowell Mellett, director of the Office of Government Reports, in connection with his charge."

Mellett should be called to testify before the subcommittee at once, Willkie said, asserting that "this charge is so serious that it should either be proved or disproved immediately."

Willkie also demanded that the subcommittee immediately examine the 15 or 20 pictures mentioned by Nye and Clark as samples of war propaganda. Nye testified he had seen only one or two of them himself and could not state in any detail "just why or how he found them objectionable," the film counsel continued. Before going any further with its "public inquisition," he said, the subcommittee should first determine whether any of the films in question are, in fact, propaganda for war.

Senator McFarland (Democrat) of Arizona, only backer of Administration foreign policy on the five-man subcommmittee, attempted again yesterday to gain permission for Willkie to cross-examine witnesses.

Chairman Clark (Democrat), of Idaho, replied that it had been the procedure of Senate committees "from time immemorial" to deny "outside counsel" permission to question witnesses.

McFarland asked Senator Bennett Clark, the witness, what possible legislation could arise out of the investigation, adding that if the sponsors of the inquiry had no legislation in mind he thought there was "other very important work we should be doing."

Clark replied that many Congressional investigations which produced significant legislation had been begun with no specific legislation in view.

"Also," he said, "if we expose this war propaganda in the movies, we destroy most of its value."

Assails Block-Booking

Clark contended that five or six film executives, through their control of production and by block-booking and "other devices," can open or close virtually all of the Nation's 17,000 theaters to "any-ideas . . . on any day and at any time."

"At the present time," he said, "they have opened those 17,000 theaters to the idea of war, to the glorification of war, to the glorification of England's imperialism, to the creation of hatred of the people of Germany and now of France, to the hatred of those in America who disagree with them."

"They are turning these 17,000 theaters into 17,000 daily and nightly mass meetings for war," he declared.

The subcommittee will resume hearings at 10:30 a. m. today. The witness will be John T. Flynn, economist and newspaper columnist.

Radio Head Denies Charge

Neville Miller, president of the National Association of Broadcasters, last night took issue with a statement he attributed to Clark, of Missouri, that the Nation's broadcasting facilities were being used largely to disseminate propaganda for war, and that a small group of radio broadcasters were exercising monopolistic control over freedom of the air.

Miller said in a letter to the committee, that "the American people and they alone exercise a day-to-day control of broadcasting far too powerful for anyone, even government itself, to interfere with. But beyond this, these men and women have voluntarily accepted as part of their public responsibility the duty to see to it that radio shall promote and enlarge free public discussion and debate, that it shall serve as an instrument of enlightenment as well as of entertainment for all the people."

Tokyo Imparts the Impression Of Progress in Talks With U. S.

retary Hull added.]

Pending this decision, which even if favorable would still require long and delicate negotiations, political and business quarters are deriving new hope from the improved atmosphere and the note of desperation that began to pervade public and private talks of late is giving way to more sober consideration.

In preparation for further conferences, the privy council listened for two hours today to an exposition of the European war situation by the war minister, Lieut. Gen. Eiki Tojo, and a naval staff officer, and though the nature of the discussion was not revealed, the press, which derives its inspiration from official quarters, has been indicating for some time that Japan expects a long war into which nobody in a responsible position here desires to plunge his own country.

New hope in the business world is reflected in the stock market, which despite the utmost caution is displaying a firm undertone which financial commentators attribute in the main to the improving chances that war in the Pacific will be avoided.

The press, despite continued flings at the United States and Britain, is likewise beginning to trim its language, and as for official quarters, the bellicose speeches and pronunciamentos that were a feature of th eMatsuoka regime have virtually disappeared or are confined to subordinate army circles.

As reards the basis of the American-Japanese negotiations, that is as much a mystery as the negotiations themselves. But the general view here is that a foundation for them may have been provided by the so-called "Atlantic charter" of eight points proclaimed by President Roosevelt and British Prime Minister Winston Churchill, properly adjusted to Pacific realities.

Fathers Fete Sons at Rotary Luncheon

A happy crowd of Washington fathers and sons took off their coats, rolled up their sleeves and threw a real party for themselves on the tenth floor of the Willard yesterday afternoon.

It was the annual father-sons' luncheon of the Washington Rotary. For the dads, the program was a cheerful variation from shop talk and sober business. For the sons, despite the heat, the affair turned into a profitable kind of Christmas party.

Each of the youngsters received a free movie ticket, a free ticket for a glass of root beer, and a prize. The prizes, distributed by Master of Ceremonies Charlie Garvin included things like baseball gloves and footballs, and flashlights.

Besides delighting the boy guests, the presents fitted into the theme of the program, which was sports.

The young guests had plenty of laughs out of a wild tale about Buford Crabtree, famous (and mythical) baseball player, told by Arch McDonald, radio sports commentator. Crabtree, McDonald said, was burning up the "nightmare league" down South, always getting to first base because no pitcher could throw a ball past his stomach without hitting it, until a fast catcher tagged him out stealing home from first.

They heard a true story about the Marine football game for the championship of China played in Shanghai in 1937, told by Maj. "Swede" Larson, head coach of the Navy football team.

Some 200 dads and 75 boys enjoyed the party. Among the sons were two who were celebrating a birthday—Charles Stuart Warner, 10, son of Dr. John W. Warner, Washington physician, of 3409 Lowell Street Northwest, and Second Lieut. Albert L. Cox, jr., 27, officer in Washington's 121st Observation Squadron, and son of Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, commander of the Washington Provisional Brigade.

Henry Brewood, 82, of 3108 South Dakota Avenue Northeast, Rotarian for 26 years and retired engraving plant owner, brought members of his family representing three younger generations. They included his son-in-law, W. H. Dunn, 53, of 2853 Brentwood Road Northeast; Dunn's son-in-law, Frank Nigh, 34, and the latter's son, Warren Brewood Nigh, 9, of 2800 Brentwood Road Northeast.

Along with the presents, there was singing. The youngsters joined in "School Days" with controlled enthusiasm, and let themselves go on "Take Me Out to the Ball Game."

Providence Nurses Graduate

Twenty-one graduates of the Providence Hospital School of Nursing yesterday were told their role is emerging to a position of greater importance than ever before as they received their diplomas in ceremonies at St. Peter's Catholic Church, Second and C Streets Southeast.

Father John Spence, of St. Anthony's parish, declared in the baccalaureate address that "all out for the common good" is the kind of citizenship needed today.

"Only by loyalty and cooperation on all fronts does a person become a good citizen," he said. He emphasized the importance of loyalty to nation, church, family and fellowman.

"In the future it is the group instead of the individual who will play the most important part in our life," he said, citing growing "group movements" in Catholic nursing.

Led by graduate and undergraduate nurses, the group of candidates filed from the hospital two blocks to the church. Entering, they passed through a double line of their sister nurses who held crossed lilies over their heads.

Four Washingtonians were among the 21 who were graduated yesterday. They were Mary Elizabeth Gubisch, 20, of 4729 Eighth Street Northwest, a graduate of Holy Cross Academy; Rita Mae Augusterfer, 25, 2009 First Street Northwest, and Rita Lorraine Cornwell, 21, 721 Quincy Street Northwest, both graduates of Notre Dame Academy, and Helen Virginia Griffith, 21, 3166 Westover Drive Southeast, a graduate of Martinsburg (W. Va.) High School.

Other graduates included Ada E. Murphy, Lillian J. Talbot, Catherine G. McLaughlin, Mary E. Coffin, Lois E. Horsman, Frances V. Spence, Janet L. Fitzwater, Margaret U. Maguire, Ruby M. Fultz, Helen E. Banchy, Josephine C. Gregg, Catherine A. Hassett, Idabelle Hoblitzell, Margaret E. Mundy, Barbara V. Wallo, Emma L. Buck, Mary J. Orbin.

Going to College Here This Fall . . . ?

Howard University Opens Tomorrow

By Robert R. Rand
Post Staff Writer

Howard University, the Nation's largest Negro college, opens its doors to the new school year tomorrow. In doing so, it also celebrates its seventy-fifth anniversary.

Located at 2401 Sixth Street Norhwest, the university's ten divisions are open to all races and both sexes. Full-time and part-time courses are offered in the College of Liberal Arts, the School of Engineering and Architecture, the School of Music, the Graduate School, the School of Religion, the School of Law, the College of Medicine, the College of Dentistry, the College of Pharmacy, and the Summer School.

Speaking on "Negro Leadership" last March, Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt said of the university, "It is a genuinely national university, and here is to be found the most completely rounded offering of training. A student can come here and get acquainted with almost any phase of our culture in which he is interested. This well-rounded, well-built, and well-staffed university is a symbol of the national concern with an intelligent Negro leadership."

Operated under an annual appropriation from the Federal Government plus private subsidy, the university has 26 buildings on the campus, and 259 teachers to care for its more than 2500 students. Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson, first Negro president of the university, marks the fifteenth year of his administration this fall.

Proud of the university's growth in three-fourths of a century, is F. D. Wilkinson, Howard's registrar. "Two thousand Negro students of collegiate grade in one institution of learning, with youth in their hearts and the future in their hands, preparing specifically for leadership in a race group making up one-tenth of our democracy, constitute a social fact whose significance in America is practically infinite," he states.

This year, in addition to its usual wide variety of courses, the university is offering 18 free national defense courses, sponsored by the United States Office of Education. They will all be given in the School of Engineering and Architecture.

Full time tuition at the university is $150 for the year, and single courses are $5 per semester hour. Courses are given from 8 a. m. to 7 p. m., and lead to bachelor's and master's degrees.

The university's eight million dollar plant includes a 140,000-book library, with a special collection on and about Negroes a large gymnasium, swimming pool, and tennis court. The football stadium, also on the campus, is now being enlarged.

Blimp Pilots to Be Trained in Washington

STUDENTS OF LIGHTER-THAN-AIR-FLYING—Lieut. Comdr. Karl Lang, U. S. N. R., gives instructions to Clifford W. Zimmerman (left) and Joseph S. Amrein, both of Akron, Ohio, two of the student pilots to be trained at Washington

The Goodyear blimp Enterprise, long a familiar sight to Washington as it carries sightseers over the Capital, from now on will cruise the air lanes in the name of national defense as well.

Henceforth, the small dirigible will include in its schedule the training of pilots of the Goodyear Co. in the operation of lighter-than-air ships, to a degree that would make them eligible for commissions in the Naval Reserve.

Two of 17 students who have been selected according to Navy and Army flying requirements already have arrived and are in training at Hoover Airport. They are Joseph S. Amrein, 29, a former boxing and football star at Ohio Wesleyan, in the class of 1938, and Clifford W. Zimmerman, 23, of Akron University.

Commander Karl Lange, skipper of the Enterprise, is instructing the student blimp pilots. Such aircraft are used by the Navy in patroling coastal waters.

Small Home Water Rates To Rise 115%

The rapid expansion of Washington's population will force a sharp rise in water rates during the next fiscal year and consumers will be asked to pay about 115 per cent more than current charges, according to Water Department budget estimates for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1943.

The heaviest burden, the Commissioners were told yesterday, must be borne by the small home owner if new demands on the water supply are to be met with financial success.

Under the department's estimates, the minimum metered consumption rates would be raised from $5.75 to $12 a year. At the same time, consumption for the minimum rate would be cut from 7500 cubic feet to 4800.

Excess Rate Unchanged

The estimates provided no change in charges for excess water used over the proposed 4800 cubic feet—the price remains at 7 cents per 100 cubic feet.

In effect, the 1943 estimates provide that the average home owner pay 37 per cent more for water and the amount used under the minimum price is cut by 36 per cent.

This will in no way hit the large consumer because minimum rates are abandoned where the consumption amounts to thousands of cubic feet annually.

If the Water Department estimates are approved, it will mean a 100 per cent increase in assessments against property owners who lay new mains. The present charge is $1.50 per linear foot and it would be increased to $3.

It was further estimated that revenue from the proposed boost in rates would increase about 23.3 per cent, or $743,125.

$2,722,403 Available

The budget report explained that the District's water system is financed through the sale of water and water main assessments. On the basis of current rates, money available for the next fiscal year totals $2,722,403, the Commissioners were told.

For water supply and distribution, the department estimates that $4,344,820 is needed for the coming fiscal year. This leaves a deficit of $1,622,417 which must be made up, the report stated.

While the deficit could be made up by the sale of securities now held by the United States Treasury for the District water fund, the budget report held that the best method was through increased rates to the consumers.

The new budget contemplates an expenditure of $1,406,930 to maintain the city's water supply. This represents an increase of $291,150 over current appropriations.

Anacostia Improvement

An item of $1,093,000 is included for improvement to the Anacostia distribution system, necessitated by the section's rapid growth.

For upkeep of the entire distribution system, the budget calls for an increased $505,370—an increase of $151,350.

Approval of an estimated $648,930 for maintenance of the aqueduct system also was asked. This is $125,000 over the current year.

Another major item is $160,000 to complete the McMillan filter plant and reservoir. Work has already started under a $400,000 current appropriation.

The report stated that Washington's daily average water consumption has increased from 84 million gallons in 1931 to 112 million gallons this year.

City Libraries Ask Increase Of $164,000

An increase of $164,000 over current appropriations was asked of the Commissioners yesterday by the city's public libraries for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1943. The total requested was $1,100,373.

Principal item in the library budget estimates was $228,000 to complete the first unit of the new central library on Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest between John Marshall Place and Sixth Street. Work on the project was started recently and the structure will cost $1,118,000 when finished.

A total of 140 new employes also was requested—101 to operate the new central library and 39 for existing extension services.

In addition, 30 temporary workers will be needed to prepare stacks at the new building, the budget report stated. They would be employed for six months.

A sharp rise in the cost of book additions and replacements prompted the trustees to request $80,000 for this work.

New personnel asked for included 2 associate librarians, 10 assistants, 11 junior librarians, 11 main assistants, 11 assistant advisers, 7 desk assistants, 2 head pages, 10 pages, 1 registration assistant, 5 department clerks, 1 chief engineer, 4 watch engineers, 1 electrician, 1 foreman janitor, 15 janitors, 5 guards, charwomen and elevator operators.

U. S. Stand Put Japan on Limb, Lions Club Told

With the United States having stiffened her diplomatic attitude toward Japan, the Nipponese government is faced with the immediate necessity of choosing between more active fulfillment of its agreement with the Axis powers or "losing face" by coming to terms with this country and Britain, Dr. John Roberts declared yesterday at the regular luncheon of the Alexandria Lions Club.

A medical missionary who spent five years in occupied China, Dr. Roberts said the new American attitude has left Japan at the crossroads where she must make a crucial decision which may have a far-reaching effect on her aspirations to become a major power. Previously, he said, the government was able to "drift along" with no set policy in international affairs.

Dr. Roberts was presented by Dr. George Schlosser, program chairman for yesterday's meeting. Dr. Nathan G. Schuman presided over the business meeting.

Rail Union Fights Train Curtailment

Baltimore, Sept. 10 (AP).—The Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen today filed with the public service commission a protest against the abandonment of 12 trains on five different Baltimore & Ohio lines in the State.

Charles W. Mitzel, State representative of the brotherhood, asserted that the discontinuance of the trains "is neither necessary nor desirable and would put the traveling public to great inconvenience."

Mitzel asked permission to have the brotherhood represented by counsel at the hearing which the public service commission has scheduled for next Tuesday.

Million Asked for D. C. Recreation System

to provide necessary funds, the Park Office budget report declared:

"Development of the recreation system for the District of Columbia has lagged far behind the program for the improvement and expansion of other municipal facilities and suffers greatly in comparison with other progressive American cities."

The Commissioners were reminded that during the 10-year period from 1930 to 1940 "no appreciable funds have been appropriated" for recreational facilities here—"despite that fact there has been a population increase of 33 per cent."

The report added that "inadequacy of facilities essential to the safety, health and happiness of children at play has been attested to by public and official complaint and dissatisfaction."

$2,184,895 Total Asked

In all, the Parks Office asked for a total of $2,184,895 to cover expenses during the coming fiscal year. This represents an increase of $234,893 over current budget figures.

The million-dollar recreation fund requested, it was explained, would enable development of 30 of the proposed 156 units at once.

"This office," the report further stated, "is submitting the item for budget purposes since Congress has not yet enacted the proposed legislation creating a Recreation Board for the District. Should the recreation bill be passed before 1943, this appropriation (the one million dollars) would give the board an opportunity for immediate constructive action."

The parks office recommended that legislation similar to the Capper-Cramton recreation bill be sponsored to make the total 18 million dollars available.

"These funds," it was pointed out, "might be amortized without interest by the District of Columbia over a period of 30 to 40 years, enabling District residents to enjoy the benefits of the recreational facilities without the necessity of greatly increasing the tax burden."

$25,000 Asked for Dam

The parks office also asked for $25,000 for the construction of a dam across Rock Creek at Pierce Mill to restore necessary water level to operate the mill.

In addition, the Commissioners were asked to approve the sum of $6600 to maintain Dumbarton Oaks, a 27-acre tract of land recently donated to the Federal Government by Robert Woods Bliss.

For the upkeep of other newly acquired park sections, the budget report calls for $10,000.

To provide for automatic promotions, an additional sergeant and 17 more privates in the Park Police force, the report requested $211,150. The present Park Police salary budget is $175,290.

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission submitted to the Commissioners a 1943 fiscal year budget estimate of $345,470—an increase of only $4,240.

The need for an extra draftsman and a few minor increases in operating expenses accounted for the estimate, it was explained.

The Zoo increased its estimates by $210,350 over current appropriations. The amount requested for the coming fiscal year was $449,610.

Maintenance and repairs to Zoo roads, mobile equipment and animal houses comprised principal items in the new budget.

Zoo Director William Mann asked for two additional policemen, a property clerk at $1620 a year, two additional keepers at $1500 each and an assistant keeper at $1320 to "control cockroaches, mice and rats" and to prevent their invasion of private property adjacent to the Zoo grounds.

An item of $2500 was requested to reroof the lion house and the same sum for refinishing the interior of the reptile house.

Subcommittee Named to Meet On Hospital

A subcommittee to meet this week with the Prince Georges County (Md.) Medical Society and decide on plans and specifications for a county hospital was appointed last night by the hospital committee of the Prince Georges County Hospital Association.

The subcommittee consists of Dr. Louis Jimal, Dr. Martin Keane and Paul Kea.

The plans and specifications are to be presented to the county commissioners with a request that steps to obtain a Federal grant for the hospital be completed immediately.

Landover Hill Asks School Bus Change

Landover Hill (Md.) Citizens Association last night urged revision of the school bus service.

Members urged that buses pick up children at the Seventy-second Avenue stop at 8 a. m., instead of shortly after the hour, as at present, and stop for them at 2:30 p. m., instead of 3, on the return trip.

The citizens also appointed a committee to investigate the desirability of lowering of the 35-mile speed limit in front of the school as a protection for children.

Oil Hoax?

Throughout the oil shortage controversy we have maintained that if there is a shortage the first thing to do is to find out how serious it is or is likely to become and then, if the outlook appears ominous, to institute rationing on a scale that will assure sufficient oil supplies for essential use. Such a procedure is sound and ought to be followed as a matter of course.

But it has not been followed. The reason is that there is still almost complete disagreement as to whether we do or do not have a serious shortage. Mr. Davies, the acting petroleum coordinator, says we have; Senator Maloney, of the committee investigating the situation, says we have not. The Supply, Priorities and Allocation Board says Mr. Davies cannot have the necessary steel for pipelines from the oil fields to the New York area. And Mr. Davies retorts that the President, the War and Navy Departments, the Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply and the Office of Production Management favor the pipelines as a national defense measure.

If this wasting administrative wrangle is partly due to uncertainty over British tanker demands, it is nonetheless equally due to a seeming inability to get at fundamental facts, including the number of tank cars actually available. This point, among others, has been debated for weeks, but nobody seems to know the answer or to be willing to accept the estimates which have been offered.

In the circumstances it is perfectly absurd to continue demanding patriotic self-denial on the part of the public. The gasoline curfew ought to be abandoned at once. It has saved little or no gas, inconvenienced drivers unnecessarily, and made the filling stations the butt of a conservation program which has been inexcusably mismanaged from the start. Worst of all, perhaps, the public—with every reason—is now in no mood to cooperate wholeheartedly, should there develop a truly serious shortage. The situation could not have been worse handled.

Talks With Tokyo

It was not so very long ago that the Japanese press and Japanese spokesmen were working themselves into a lather over what Col. Hayton Mabuchi called "the unpardonable crimes" of the United States and Great Britain in opposing Japan's aggressive course in Eastern Asia. Strong action was demanded of the Tokyo government even if it meant getting into war with the Western democracies. The demand that Japan bar the way to American oil shipments to Soviet Russia was particularly vehement. But these brave postures and threatening words left Washington and London cold. Neither the United States nor Great Britain allowed itself to be intimidated. The American oil tankers reached Vladivostok without incident, and Japan found herself in the unhappy position of a man whose bluff has been called.

Since then a decided change appears to have taken place in the mood of the Japanese. The press of the island empire has muffled the criticism of the United States, and abandoned its threatening tone. Certain newspapers have gone so far as to inform their readers that the war in Russia is likely to be a long one. Others have suggested that perhaps it would be better for Nippon to loosen and, if necessary, even sever the ties binding her to the Axis. Yesterday the fact was made public that the American Ambassador, Mr. Joseph C. Grew, had conferred with the Japanese foreign minister no fewer than a dozen times within a week. Concurrently, on this side of the water, rumors are prevalent that a detente in Japanese-American relations is in the offing.

There have been such rumors in the past, and nothing has come of them. The present batch may prove to have no greater validity. But it is not at all unlikely that Japan, having found that she could not move forward with safety, has decided to explore the advisability of a face-saving retreat. Certainly, with conditions as they are, it is impossible for her to stand still. Her foreign trade is in a state of paralysis which, if continued, would result in Japan's economic collapse in a matter of months. It is of vital importance to her, then, to reopen the doors closed by the British, American and Dutch freezing of Japanese funds and Japan's unwillingness to risk sending ships to those countries.

However, neither the United States nor Great Britain have shown the slightest inclination to abandon their policies of helping China, on the one hand, and Russia, on the other. In this respect there should be no let up simply because the Japanese are showing a disposition to climb down. The unanswered question is whether, without cutting athwart existing American and British commitments, a modus vivendi between Japan and the democratic powers can be achieved. The effort is worthy of every encouragement.

Shreds And Patches

A reminder that the Neutrality Act is still on the statute books is provided by the decision to permit American citizens in Britain to return home in belligerent ships. Under our neutrality law Americans must stick to nonbelligerent transport. By such a prohibition, ran the theory, the chance that Americans might be killed would be lessened. But it was not so much the regard for American lives that inspired the clause; the object was to prevent, so far as possible, the creation of incidents which might drag America into war.

The trouble with the provision was that it left Americans abroad in some difficulty in getting home. There are 5000 Americans still in Britain. If they wished to come back, they had to go to the expense of obtaining airplane passage to Lisbon, and then wait months for accommodations. Then they had to make the final journey by clipper or take an American boat—neither of which forms of transport is easy to obtain. The situation was fast becoming intolerable. It is no answer to say that those people had their opportunity when the war clouds were brewing. Affairs had to be adjusted, and this took time. Moreover, many of these Americans naturally hesitated to desert their livelihoods without any foreknowledge that they could obtain jobs here in America. Life in America, to these expatriates, would have been equivalent to starting life anew. But a good many seem now to have so arranged their interests as to be in a position to leave Britain. The Government would have been wanting in elementary consideration for its citizens abroad if it had continued to keep a statutory difficulty in their path.

But there is a bigger reason than this for the scrapping of what remains of the neutrality law. Nullification started with the Lend-Lease Act. Under this act our country became committed, as closely as any country could be committed, to the defeat of Hitlerism. At that time the isolationist Senators with one accord declared that a vote for lend-lease was a vote for war. It was absurd to deny that the vote at least acknowledged and sealed and extended our vital stake in a Nazi defeat. The Post, which contended throughout the lend-lease debates that our Nation was in the war whether we liked it or not, never lent itself to this disingenuousness. It appealed for forthright repeal of the neutrality law rather than nullification by the lend-lease law. Now the neutrality statute has become even more a thing of shreds and patches with this latest decision. It should be straightforwardly cast into limbo. We need to shorten the war so that our Nation can return to those paths of peace which will always be denied to us as long as Hitler stalks abroad.

Warning On Prices

Secretary Morgenthau's speech at Boston is a further reminder that this country is already on the slippery slope of inflation. The Secretary of the Treasury gave an exposition which could be understood by even the tyro in financial affairs. Here we have an economic system more and more dedicated to the output of nonconsumables. Output of consumables, in consequence, is contracting. But the process of producing goods of any kind involves the disbursement of wages and profits and dividends to people who buy only consumables. And, since output now is at a peak, so is the output of this purchasing power. Thus we have a situation of a contracting output of consumables and an expanding creation of money incomes to buy them. This means that incomes are constantly shrinking in purchasing power over consumables.

A rise in prices, in other words, is under way, or inflation; and this is the worst of all economic evils, since, as Mr. Morgenthau says, it is "more destructive of morale than any single force." How far inflation has gone was told in a recent radio address by Leon Henderson. He pointed out that since the first of this year the average price of basic raw materials has advanced more than 25 per cent, and wholesale prices are up 11 per cent. There will be trouble ahead, as Mr. Henderson warns, when retail prices and living costs begin fully to reflect these advances in wholesale prices. And the longer we wait before doing anything to curb further increases the more difficult it will be to establish effective controls.

Mr. Morgenthau in his list of preventives of further inflation pleaded for the passage of the price control bill now before Congress. But it is of little use to control prices unless at the same time we control the elements that go into prices, chiefly wages. In this connection British experience with wages and prices is of interest. The British government's price stabilization plans have been upset by the rejection by the Trade Union Congress of proposals for wage stabilization. The unions are said to favor price stabilization and extension of rationing, but they object to efforts to stabilize wages after sharp advances in living costs have occurred. And quite rightly. The British government, it seems, is paying the penalty of its failure to deal firmly with the price problem during the first year and a half of the war. As a result the index of living costs is now about 28 per cent above the prewar level, while the prices of many goods not subject to control have gone even higher, with wage rates lagging behind the procession. Under such conditions labor demands for wage increases are hard to resist. The British situation should serve as a warning to us of the dangers of delaying action on price control legislation and of not making it all-inclusive.

The New A. A. F.

The British would doubtless be the first to tell us that if American armed forces ever have to attack or defend objectives in the Atlantic area, the essential elements of success will be perfect timing and coordination of sufficient sea, land and air forces. For had the British been able to observe these cardinal principles in the Norway offensive and in the defensive action in Crete, the course of the war might have been quite different.

In the light of their experience it is reassuring, therefore, to learn that we now have a new joint military command designated as the Atlantic Amphibious Force. Consisting of the First Marine Division, the First Marine aircraft wing, the First base depot at Charleston, S. C., and assigned Army troops, its job will be to take and hold objectives anywhere in the Atlantic. The establishment of an expeditionary force grew out of joint Army-Navy-Marine maneuvers held last month on the North Carolina coast. And the men have been rigorously trained in the dangerous tactics of landing on hostile shores.

To the Marines, particularly, landing force operations are an old story. But in past campaigns there was never anything like the coordination of forces now accepted as a military essential. Air support existed only in the minds of socalled visionaries; the Marines simply landed and took over. Yet the visionaries have long since been vindicated, and if and when action is called for, the A. A. F. will move with enormous striking power, perfectly coordinated. If the Axis has plans of its own for the Atlantic area—and few will dispute this—it will have to deal first with a new American unit, a supertask force which includes some of the best trained and toughest fighting men in the world.

Back From Limbo

When it is told in full, as one day it will be, the story of the 199 Frenchmen found at Spitzbergen by the Canadian raiding party and brought back to Britain, should prove one of the great adventure stories of the present war. All that we know of it now is that these men were war prisoners who escaped separately or in tiny groups from their Nazi jailers, and worked their way by one means or another across the hundreds of miles to the Russian frontier. As soon as they crossed into Russia, they were, of course, interned by the Reds. But after Hitler's attack on Russia, the British government arranged with the Soviet for the transfer of these Frenchmen to a point in the Arctic where they could be picked up when opportunity offered.

The Canadians found them in rags, emaciated from months of hunger, their faces hidden behind long matted hair and beards. They came out in small boats to meet their rescuers, weeping with gratitude and joy. It is reported that some of them attempted to kiss the warship that had brought them deliverance; that others tried to sing the British anthem and broke down in tears. "For 14 months," said one of them, "we have been dead men; now we live again."

What these men experienced in those 14 months since their capture in Flanders, by what bribes or subterfuges they contrived their escapes, and from what strange fate in Russia they were saved by the unexpected turn of the war, we can only vaguely surmise. Doubtless any one of them could tell a tale equaling in suspense and interest the fictional tale of Sergt. Grischa. But, over and above all that, the story, as far as we know it now, has a symbolic interest. These men are the symbol of their nation, which, like them, awaits the hour of deliverance and the renewal of life.

ON A WOMAN NAMED LIBERTY

They have dug her a Stygian bed
Deep in the slumbering sod.
They have buried the tears she shed
From the eyes of themselves and God.

Do they think they have hidden her there
From now 'til the end of earth?
Not while the world is fair—
Not while the race has worth.

Her dreams are as poignant still
And her mind is a living flame . . .
She will walk on some starlit hill
When they are not even a name.

Negotiated Peace

Now the tension is growing between us and Japan, and the war party in America is delighted as it feels, at last, here is a chance to break into the war. The Administration knows that a declaration of war against Japan would be inexcusable and indefensible, but counting on our dislike for Japan Roosevelt thinks he could get by with it.

Knowing this act would bring Germany in on the side of Japan, a declaration of war against Japan would be taking us into total war, in a sense, by the back door with the same consequences as if we entered by the front door—probably hundreds of thousands, perhaps millions, killed and crippled, and at an estimated cost of 250 million dollars, an amount equal to double the assessed valuation of all the real property in the United States.

It is a very critical time, therefore if the American people wish to remain out of this foreign holocaust. And they should lose no time in letting the war party, including the President of the United States, know that they oppose overwhelmingly this latest scheme for involving us in a war which would be probably fought on all seas, oceans and continents on the globe.

The cost to us, in men, money and materials for three, five or ten years, in defending the British Empire would be far greater than anything that Germany could possibly to do us.

If we engage in total war on the side of Great Britain the best we could expect is a stalemate. Indeed it would not be for the best interest of the world that a decisive victory be won by either England or Germany. Such a victory would result in a dictated peace from which another world war, in time, would spring. The sooner we realize and admit that imperialisms have outlived their usefulness, the nearer we will be to an enduring peace. Any peace which is not a general settlement freely entered into between the parties will inevitably lead to another great war.

Disciplining The 'Free'

So much has been said about this wonderful, free country of ours, that sometimes I wonder, if people do not misunderstand the meaning of "free." I have been told time and time again what mustn't and what shouldn't be done, because the United States is a "free" country.

Mothers feel terrible because their babies are in the Army—yet this is the only place where they learn how to behave. I come from the only "free" country in the world—Switzerland—yet everything is compulsory. Children must go to school. They must learn a trade. They must be soldiers. And how proud their mothers are, when they see their sons big and strong and clean. They do not yet need dances and entertainment to induce them to fight for their country. They love their "free country" and are proud to die for it, should it come to that.

Unless we teach the children, in school and at home, the real meaning of a "free country" I am afraid we shall loose that freedom!

New Deal Democracy

Mr. Ruggles' condemnation of New Deal democracy created a desire to answer him. He quotes Roger Babson's use of the simile about the river. He seems to think that the American people are incapable of governing themselves. He may be right, but I think he could find examples of his style of reasoning in the Vichy government, the Nazi and Fascist creeds.

He states that professors started us down the hill. I hadn't noticed that we were on the toboggan. Mr. Ruggles seems to forget that Mr. Roosevelt and the "professors" took this country over at the lowest ebb on our national tide on record. Because they did not wave a wand, speak a few magic words and restore the country to a 100-billion-dollar economy with a "chicken in every pot" and "two cars in every garage" they are branded failures.

Mr. Ruggles doesn't know his American history. The past under those "great leaders" he so greatly admires has been a roller coaster of great thrills of successive booms and collapses.

Russian Spots

It seems strange that we should be told that Russia is fighting for democracy. May I remind your readers of the persecution of priests and of all educated people in that country? To take the last two years, we have the Russian aggression in Bessarabis, North Bukovina, Finland, Lithuania, Poland, Latvia and Esthonia—quite a long list. The standard of living in the Baltic states under Bolshevik rule was reduced to a measure beggaring all description.

It is quite absurd to regard Russia as the protector of small nations, none of whom wished to have anything to do with the Reds. Even Yugoslavia, a kindred nation, did not recognize Red Russia until 1939, until which date a czarist ambassador was accredited in Belgrade. Early in 1939 I myself saw the old Russian colors flying from the ambassador's house in the Yugoslav capital.

The brutal air raids on defenseless Finnish towns were described during the Russo-Finnish war in your own columns. Are we to believe that the Russians have suddenly changed their spots? I, for one, refuse to believe it. The tens of thousands of massacred men, women and children in Russia, murdered simly because they formerly owned property or because they gathered together in prayer should remind us that the Bolsheviks are ruthless aggressors who have nothing in common with our democracy whatever.

Congratulations

Heartiest congratulations to The Post on your "Guns for Soldiers" series. It has been an exceedingly able piece of analytical and interpretative reporting, especially so in view of the technical nature of the subjects covered. It deserves the Pulitzer Prize.

Nothing need be added to your appraisal of the conduct of the defense program to date. It is an appalling story of lack of planning and incompetent leadership. The lessons we learned in the last war seem to have been forgotten. The basic explanation of the failure described by The Post lies, not in lack of knowledge of the technique of defense planning, for these are known, but in entrusting the management of the program to a curious collection of neophytes, dilettantes, improvisers, imposters and showmen. Saving Power

It is interesting to read that plans for the War Department's $35,000,000 Army center in Arlington, housing a population of 20,000, call for walls that are "solid windowless blocks" of concrete, shutting out all sunshine and daylight.

No doubt this will be a great help in that saving of electricity and "power conservation," in the name of defense, to which the rest of us are urged to subscribe.

Free People

We are not a nation of free people in America until we have "freedom from the four F's." To wit:

1. Freedom from politics.
2. Freedom from poverty.
3. Freedom from pressure groups.
4. Freedom from propaganda.

Movie Propaganda

I hope it's not too late to answer the letter of M. Davis in your September 5 issue. Mr. Davis objected to the motion picture "Underground," an American-made film dealing with a phase of Nazi persecution. Mr. Davis was disgusted with it. He believes that its makers are ignorant people.

He says the film failed of its purpose to "create fear and war spirit in America." I saw the film, and I was not given the impression that this was its purpose at all. Its purpose was to show in dramatic form what everyone in America knows—that the Nazis use ruthless methods to root out those who still try to practice free speech in Germany. The story of the film was based on fact, facts that have been printed in newspapers in many cities, in books with circulations running into millions. The only fictitious thing was the use of nonreal names.

It is my recollection that the producers of this film advertised it for what it was and did not in any way conceal the fact that it was an anti-Nazi film, laid in Nazi Germany, and dealing with the underground radio movement; and if, as Mr. Davis says, "it caused many parents sleepless nights," well and good. If it takes a Hollywood film to cause any American citizen to spend one sleepless night pondering the Nazis, then that film does a public service.

But how ridiculous Mr. Davis sounds when he condemns the film further as being unfit for American children, because of its suggestive use of violence and torture. American children have seen hundreds of Hollywood films using the same themes, with plain, ordinary American gangster backgrounds. I do not argue for or against these gangster films. But I am surprised that Mr. Davis confuses the intent of these two types of films.

"Underground" ended on a splendid note of hope and courage. If Mr. Davis was instilled with fear and gloominess at its end, he has only himself to blame. If he is not prepared to accept grim facts as picturized in honest films, then what jitters he must receive to read the daily newspapers.

Mr. Davis implies that the producers of such films are exerting themselves to "silly lengths" of propaganda. Believe me, Mr. Davis, if ever Hollywood were allowed to make pictures without Legion of Decency censorship and based on the Nazi terror, you wouldn't have breath enough to express your fear. As it is, Hollywood producers are doing what they can to dramatize the world's No. 1 danger without distortion and exaggeration.

Agrees With Byrd

Have received Senator Harry F. Byrd address, of September 1, on "National Defense Now." If not now, when? I agree with him in most every line and word. He is the soundest man we have in Government today, if we may still say we are a democracy.

Unless our Government quits social reforms that are dragging us from democracy, we are not going to get anywhere with defense. The New Deal is not an American product. I have hated it, morning, noon and night, ever since it raised its serpent head. It destroyed the Democratic party for the N. D. I am only voicing millions of thinking people's thoughts when I protest a government that needs fixing badly, before we can even arm ourselves. OTT RADER.

Southeast Transportation

Isn't it about time that the residents of Anacostia and Congress Heights be given better service at cheaper rates by the taxicab service and the transit company?

The southeast section of our splendid city seems to be the "stepchild" section while the northwest section seems to be the favorite and pampered section.

In the southeast section it is not unusual to wait for a bus from 10 to 20 minutes while taxi fare into the city is 80 cents.

In the northwest section buses run about every five minutes and taxi fare is 20 and 25 cents. How come? JOSEPH HERMAN.

The Post Impressionist

With Vilest Worms . . .

Pavel Ivanovitch was a creature of many moods. He had his gay and happy moments, but I rarely got the benefit of them, except from afar. His gay and happy moods coincided nicely with invitations from his rich friends on Beacon Hill, and from the rear of the balcony I would occasionally catch a glimpse of him in the best seats of Symphony Hall, wreathed in smiles, his shirt-front bulging over a rich and ample dinner, paying exquisite courtesies to some rich and middle-aged woman.

Being Russian, he also had his moods of dark and dismal despair, and I usually got the full impact of them. Pavel Ivanovitch would telephone and beg me, in a sepulchral pedal point, please to come over at once.

"Vanya," he would moan, "you are the only friend I have in the world, and I must see you. I do not think I can go on living any more. Please come over and see me at once. Please, Vanya."

These calls usually came around six in the evening, so that common decency would compel me to invite Pavlick to meet me at the Cafe de Paris for dinner. He would show up with a lugubrious face, sighing dismally, and would clasp both my hands in his and assure me that the thought of my friendship was the only tenuous bond that held him in this vale of tears.

"Ah, Vanitchka, you are my only true friend. Everyone else, they only think what they can get out of me. They do not appreciate my soul at all. My rich friends on Beacon Hill, do they they ever think about my soul?" He would declaim into the soup. "No! All they think about is that I can play the piano for them, and some of the rich ladies think maybe I will kiss them."

Pavlick shuddered as the waiter set a huge platter of boeuf Stroganoff before him.

"And Vera: what does my soul mean to her? Nothing, absolutely nothing! She thinks I will teach her how to interpret Skriabin. And my Russian friends—ha, they are no friends at all! They think because I am a son of nobility I will give them prestige to be my friends. But you, dearest Vanya, you are a true friend. You do not think what you can get out of me: you think about my soul. And you know why you think about my soul? Because you have a soul, too!

"But it is not a good thing to have a soul," Pavlick would continue, as he tackled the salad. "When you have a soul, then you suffer. Then you begin to say to yourself, 'Why do I go on living? What is life holding for me? What good does all this do?'

"And then you begin to think about yourself, and you think how happy you were when you were a little child with your dear mother, and what good times you had when you were a lad in the naval academy, and then you think of your dear father murdered by the Bolsheviki and your dear mother starving in Paris and your dear and only sister in Shanghai, and yourself a penniless music student in a foreign country far from your own dear native land. And the: here I am, without any friends, without any money, without any future, begging my friends for my bread. And then I say, 'What does this lead to? Where am I going?' And then I know there is only one thing left for me: soocide."

"Oh no, Pavlick," I would protest, not suicide!"

"Yes, soocide," Pavlick would reply firmly, refilling his demitasse.

Having thus set the tone for the evening, Pavlick would continue all night in the same vein, considering "soocide" from every possible angle and firmly resisting my efforts to make him see the brighter side of things. There were times when the brighter side of things was none too apparent to me, anyway, and after such an evening with Pavlick I was sometimes on the verge of contemplating "soocide" myself.

After a particularly exhausting bout with Pavel Ivanovitch and his soul, I determined to turn the tables on him and present him with my impending flight from this vile world, with vilest worms to dwell.

When next I heard his tragic "Vanitchka" over the telephone, I pitched my voice a minor third below his and began, "Ah, Pavlinka, I am so glad to hear your voice. I have been thinking all day I cannot endure this life any longer, and I have been walking along the Charles and thinking how peaceful it would be to be dead. Will you come over, please, and cheer me up?"

There was an appreciable pause. "But, Vanya, I am not in a good mood to cheer anybody up. I am very, very unhappy today."

"Then we can be unhappy together. Do come on over, and we can have dinner at the Cock Horse."

Pavlick rose to that lure, as I knew he would, and presently I was recounting my woes over the dinner table. I had no friends and no prospects; I had had four short stories and twelve poems rejected in the last fortnight; I had failed my course in Greek Art, and I had broken a piece off a rear tooth eating popcorn the night before. Pavlick agreed heartily to all this and added observations of his own concerning my inadequacy to cope with the problems of life.

When we returned to my room, Pavlick embroidered extensively on these themes and ended up with the declaration that "soocide" was the only way out.

"Let us commit soocide together, like two faithful friends," Pavlick proposed. "I will write a farewell note. Pavlick, laboriously composed:

"Farwell to the Cruel Warld!!!

"Farwell, cruel warld!!! Two etirnal frends cannot any longer bare up to your cruel blose. We leave you together, united in our etirnal frendship. We despize you!!!"

"Now," said Pavlick, "Dearest Vanya, when shall we commit soocide? Saturday night?"

"Not Saturday night, Pavlick; we are going to hear Schnabel play the Emperor Concerto then."

"Then would Sunday night be all right"

"Perfectly," I agreed.

"And let us have dinner at the Cock Horse first. What do you say, Vanitchka?"

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Beginning Of The Road

LIPPMANN

IT may be said, I believe, that there is a general feeling among men everywhere that events have outrun our opinions about them, and that this explains why the Roosevelt-Churchill declaration got such a poor response, why the subsequent Hitler-Mussolini declaration got almost no response at all. These official formulations of policy have seemed out-dated, no longer corresponding to the realities of the war.

THEY are out-dated. In that both of them might just as well have been written in the summer of 1940 as in the summer of 1941. Thus in the Allied declaration there were on the one hand general promises for the future and on the other dogged defiance of Hitler; there was missing any indication of how the Allies expect to pass from unrelenting war against Nazism to that equitable peace with Germany which the declaration calls for. In 1940, when the supreme and exclusive consideration in all men's minds was how to insure the survival of Britain and of China and the defense of the Americas in case Britain and China fell, the missing link in the Allied policy would not have been missed. But in 1941 it has been missed because, for reasons which we must make every effort to understand, the war has now developed in such a way that the paramount consideration is no longer exclusively how to survive the Nazi assault but how to terminate the struggle successfully.

The Axis declaration fell even flatter on men's ears because Hitler and Mussolini promised in the triumphant phrases of 1940 to do what in 1941 they obviously cannot do—that is to dictate a settlement to all their enemies and unite Europe in a harmonious peace. In the summer of 1940 after the fall of France these phrases were impressive because they corresponded to the appearance of things in a Europe where the German armies were supreme, Britain was isolated, Russia neutralized, and America distant and detached. In the summer of 1941 the same phrases are not impressive because it is obvious to all that Hitler still has several wars to win before he can begin to dictate peace and pacify even the European continent.

DURING the past year, since the fall of France, there has developed a radical change in the character of the war which though as yet we realize it only dimly and have taken no account of it officially, is having a profound effect on the minds of men. This change may be described as a demonstration that it is not within the capacity of Hitler to bring the conflict to any end, and that, therefore, it will go on indefinitely and interminably until the Allies find the ways and means to end it. As a result of this demonstration, there exists for the first time since this revolutionary conflict began a condition of affairs in which the people on both sides of the battle line have begun to ask the same question and to look in the same direction for the answer.

The question is how the war can be ended since it is proved that Hitler and Mussolini cannot end it and can only expand it and prolong it. It is to this question that Allied policy must be addressed if it is to be equal to the situation which has been brought about during this year—by Hitler's failure to make peace with France and even to begin to pacify the continent, by his expansion of the war into Russia, by his destruction of neutrality as a workable policy in any great nation. For, having stood supreme and unopposed in Europe 12 months ago, Hitler has demonstrated to the world that he is unable to limit his objectives and even to attempt to terminate his war-making.

OUTSIDE the Axis the effect has been to multiply his enemies, to convince all the peoples that as long as Hitler exists, he must expand his aggressions, and that they will all encounter him somewhere sometime unless his career is ended before he can get at them. Thus there has been formed under the pressure of his assaults the greatest popular coalition which has ever been brought together in the history of the world. But this is only one side of the shield. The other, which can no longer be neglected, is the effect of this transformation of the war upon Germany and her allies.

It must be just as evident to the Germans and Italians as it is to us that Hitler's resounding victories have not brought peace but only a longer war and more enemies. Even if we did not know it from reliable reports, we could be certain that the Italians and an increasing number of Germans must be wondering how and when, if ever, Hitler can bring this war to a conclusion. No magic of the propagandists can disguise the fact that the war is not ending, that no end is in sight, that there are new enemies in the field, and that the casualties are increasing, not diminishing. The Axis peoples may dismiss angrily the statements of Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt that they will not negotiate peace with Hitler. But no one can dismiss the objective fact that, having conquered the continent of Europe, Hitler has nothing to offer the Germans but the prospect of more wars which have no end.

THUS in the darkness and the cold of the coming winter, the question of how the war is to be ended is bound to be anxiously examined. Even if we do not know how to answer it as yet, even if all we can say for the present is that we mean to make very sure that Hitler cannot end it, it is necessary that we face the question. For in this war, which has become a people's war, the fact that Hitler cannot end the war is the fatal disease of Hitlerism. At the same time a failure upon the part of the Allies to face the question, and finally to answer it, will not only fortify Hitler but gravely impair the cause of the Allies. The situation which is now developing will demand that Hitler's demonstrated incapacity to end the war should be met by Allied demonstrations that the war can be ended.

This is not beyond the wit of man, however long the road, if only we can find the place where the road to peace begins. I think it begins with the establishment in Germany of the conviction that it is impossible for Hitler to win the war or for Hitler to end the war. This conviction can be made complete only by military effort which proves that Hitler can never win a decision. But as this conviction develops, as Hitler becomes identified with an interminable indecisive war, the Germans are bound to begin thinking whether, if they could depose the Nazi regime, they could escape the vengeance which, as they know quite well, they have earned.

IT IS to this critical question that the Allied statesmen will have to address themselves in order to hasten the end of the war and prepare the kind of peace they have already promised. It is by no means an easy question. For where the Nazis have sowed their seeds, there will be a harvest of hatred as terrible as any in the history of the modern world. The Germans know this and they know too that Hitler has implicated them in the crimes of the Nazis, and what would be the consequences. This fact, together with the efficient terrorism of the secret police, ties the Germans to the Nazi regime.

Almost certainly these ties cannot begin to break until, through the mounting power of their enemies, the danger to Germans of remaining with Hitler begins to be at least as great as the danger of removing Hitler. But this situation will develop sooner if the Allies have succeeded in showing the Germans that they can conceive of a possible German government with which they could negotiate a workable peace.

IT IS neither possible now, nor would it do anything but provoke fresh terrors in Germany, to attempt to name the kind of German government with which an armistice, and eventually negotiations, could be begun. But what is possible and most desirable, it seems to me, is to cease talking as if a negotiated peace were in itself a bad thing, and to say instead what in fact every sensible person means: That Hitler has to be fought because it is impossible to negotiate with Hitler and that the object of the fighting is to find a German government with which a reliable and decent peace can be negotiated.

Such a re-definition of the Allied aims would produce no sudden miracle but, because it is honestly fitted to the question which will be in the minds of Germans, it will begin to work and have its effect and cause the Germans to consider what kind of German government they could establish which could in fact end the war and liquidate the Nazi crimes. Then they might be led to consider the extreme desirability of deposing the Nazi regime while the German army is still capable of an orderly withdrawal from the occupied territory, and capable still of insuring some equality of bargaining power in the peace negotiations. And they might be led to consider further whether their best chance of liquidating the vengeance which the Nazis have incurred will not lie in a German government led by Germans who are known to have had no part in the Nazi regime.

SUCH modest approaches to an answer to the critical question may not, one must humbly admit, be the right approaches. But that the question is crucial and that we must now seek the answer is, I believe, certain.

U. S. May Arm Ships

Question Raised Here

By Edward T. Folliard

Post Staff Writer

The question of arming American merchant ships with guns to ward off submarines and bombers is being given serious consideration here as a result of German attacks on the Robin Moor, the Steel Seafarer and the Sessa.

Capt. John Holliday, whose Steel Seafarer was sunk in the Red Sea by a German aerial torpedo, yesterday made a statement in Cairo pleading for the arming of American merchantmen so that they might "shoot back."

Capt. Holliday, a native of Baltimore, arrived in port with his 35 officers and men after being rescued by a British warship and a Danish merchantman. He spent three hours at the American Legation in Cairo drafting a report on the sinking of the Steel Seafarer.

"If we are going to run into these fellows," he told an International News Service correspondent, "we should have guns. We ought to be able to shoot back."

Some high officials thought that President Roosevelt might discuss the question in the important speech he is to deliver tonight.

These officials were agreed that, if merchant ships are to be armed, Congress would have to amend the Neutrality Act. This act is quite specific in its language dealing with armed merchantmen.

Section VI says:

"Whenever the President shall have issued a proclamation under the authority of section 1 (a), it shall thereafter be unlawful, until such proclamation is revoked, for any American vessel, engaged in commerce with any foreign state, to be armed, except with small arms and ammunition . . ."

In the weeks just before the United States entered the World War, President Woodrow Wilson asked Congress for authority to arm American merchant vessels, and the result was a furious battle between the White House and the Senate.

President Wilson, in a message to Congress on February 26, 1917, asking for the necessary authority, said he was not proposing or contemplating war. He said he was merely asking Congress to give him "the means and authority to safeguard in practice the rights of a great people, to supply our merchant ships with defensive arms should that become necessary. . . ."

While Congress was considering the proposed legislation, the British secret service intercepted the famous Zimmerman note—a message sent by Alfred Zimmerman, undersecretary of the German ministry of foreign affairs, proposing an alliance between Germany and Mexico, whereby Mexico was to reconquer her lost territory in Texas, New Mexico and Arizona.

Aroused by this expose, the House passed the armed ship bill, 403 to 13. The Senate would have passed it, too, but 11 Senators, led by the elder La Follette, filibustered until the session automatically came to an end on March 4. President Wilson denounced these 11, calling them "a little group of wilful men."

A month and two days later, the United States was in the World War.

If the United States does decide to arm its merchant ships this time, it will be in much better shape than it was 24 years ago from the standpoint of trained gunners.

Merchant marine officers who have undergone training with the Navy and the Coast Guard have been given gunnery instructions. Some of the unlicensed merchant seamen who have been trained by the United States Maritime Commission also have been given gunnery training at Hoffman's Island.

This training in the use of guns to combat submarines and aircraft has not been on such a large scale, so that it might be necessary to call on the Navy for reinforcements. In the World War, however, the Navy had to supply all of the gunners, or "armed guards," for merchant ships.

Capt. Holliday, master of the Steel Seafarer, told newsmen in Cairo that his ship was attacked at 11 o'clock at night. He said that the American flag at the stern was not illuminated, but that the running lights were lit and that the moon was bright.

"We were not blacked out," he said. "There could not have been the slightest doubt as to the identity of my ship. The plane flew so close before attacking that it almost scraped the mast."

The captain said that in the moonlight the two huge American flags painted on both sides of the ship were plainly visible, as was her name, painted in large white letters.

Taylor Meets Pope

POPE PIUS XII

Peace Aims, Stand Toward Russia, Reported Topic of Vatican Parleys

By the Associated Press

Vatican City, Sept. 10.—Myron C. Taylor, President Roosevelt's personal emissary, began an important exchange of views between the President and the Vatican today in two long private audiences with Pope Pius XII and Luigi Cardinal Maglione, papal secretary of state.

There were indications that war and peace aims figured largely in the talks.

The President's envoy was understood in usually informed circles to have told the Pope that in so far as Soviet Russia was concerned, Mr. Roosevelt was more interested in the welfare of the world's peoples than in the form of government as such.

Earlier, British Minister Sir Francis D'Arcy Godolphin Osborne had an hours' private audience with the Pope. Subject matter of the discussion was not disclosed.

The urgency of Taylor's mission was indicated by the Pope's receiving him within 24 hours after his arrival by plane. They talked for 1 hour and 10 minutes alone in the Pontiff's private library.

Cardinal Maglione interrupted a vacation in southern Italy and returned to the Vatican to talk with Taylor. Their conference lasted more than two hours and was said to have been a "tour de l'horizon" of the war and the European situation.

Harold Tittman, American diplomatic officer attached to Taylor's office, and the Rev. Walter Carrol, American attache in the papel secretary of state's office, accompanied Taylor to the Vatican, but did not take part in the conference.

The talks today were only the beginning. Taylor is to see Cardinal Maglione again tomorrow and the Pope next week. The President's envoy, who flew to Rome with his wife despite his 67 years and a serious illness last year, intends to return to Washinton to report fuller to the President than he can be cable.

Taylor declined to disclose what was said in the audiences. From other sources, however, it was learned that "the welfare of the peoples of various countries" was the keynotes of the talks.

The Pope set forth a five-point program for peace with justice on Christmas Eve, 1939, which he elaborated last Christmas Eve. President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill have an eight-point program. Both call for political justice, access to economic goods and disarmament.

Some observers suggested the conferences might hinge on those programs and their coordination. Others suggested that Mr. Roosevelt may be seeking to enlist the Pope's aid in conciliating the position of Catholics, particularly in America, to the aid which the United States and Britain have promised Russia, whose atheistic tendencies have long been denounced by the church.

The Pope and Taylor talked in English and Taylor was understood to have found the Pope's mastery of the language even further improved since he left Rome in August last year.

U. S. Citizens Now May Leave England On Belligerent Ships

The United States relaxed its neutrality rules yesterday to permit Americans, in cases of great emergency, to travel home from England aboard ships of nations at war, at their own expense and risk.

The change in regulations was made to accommodate especially naturalized American citizens in England, who may lose their citizenship if they do not return within a few weeks. It may be extended, however, to Americans anxious to quit the Far East and continental Europe.

Previously, since there is no American shipping to British ports, virtually the only routes for Americans to use in returning home have been the crowded transatlantic Clipper plane lines from Lisbon to New York. It often takes months to obtain a reservation on one of these ships.

The change in the rule was first made known when Glenn Abbey, acting United States Consul General in London, circularized about 3,000 of the approximately 5,000 Americans now in Great Britain.

Abbey warned naturalized citizens that they could not retain their citizenship if they lived indefinitely in a foreign country.

Secretary of State Hull told a press conference that consuls in Great Britain would have authority to validate passports for Americans desirous of traveling home aboard belligerent ships.

Means of enabling Americans in other countries to return to the United States are also under study, he said.

Hull emphasized that Americans traveling on British, Norwegian, Danish or other belligerent ships would do so at their own risk.

Persian Gulf Ports Suggested To Transship Supplies to Reds

Persian Gulf ports—brought into the Russo-British sphere of operations by the recent occupations of Iraq and Iran—have been suggested as potential transshipment points for supplies destined for Soviet Russia in her battle against the German invaders.

"Basra, Abzadan and Bandar Shahpur are some of the exotic-sounding Oriental names that may figure in any Middle East supply line," points out a bulletin from the National Geographic Society. "These ports, although more than twice the sailing distance from New York around the African continent that Vladivostok is from San Francisco across the Pacific, nevertheless offer the only feasible alternate route now open from the south to the Soviet Union.

"From New York to Basra, at the central head of the Persian Gulf, is a journey of more than 11,500 nautical miles; from Liverpool to Basra is a distance of nearly 11,000 nautical miles.

"Iran owns practically all of the ports along the Arabian Nights coast of the Persian Gulf, scene of classical wars and one-time slave trade and piracy. For Iran occupies the entire northern and eastern curve of the Gulf with the exception of a less-than-50-mile stretch of shore held by Iraq at the narrow head of the waters.

"Basra, home town of Sinbad the Sailor, and Iraq's only port of consequence, lies some 50 air miles inland at the junction of the historic Tigris and Euphrates Rivers. It was occupied by British troops during the World War, and again recently when Iraq was taken over. The city has a normal population of about 85,000. Its port facilities are reported to be excellent, the result of extensive improvements in the last two decades, including new machinery, wharves, dockyards and warehouses. Basra also has a seaplane base and a modern airport, suggesting its possible use as a bomber ferry station."

Case of Capt. Ramsay

From the Economist (London) August 9

In the summer of last year, Capt. Ramsay, M. P., was detained under Regulation 18B made under the Emergency Powers (Defense) Act, and since that time he has been held in Brixton gaol. In commenting on the episode, the New York Times—one of Britain's best friends in America—said that Capt. Ramsay had by a circuitous route sent information to the enemy, and Capt. Ramsay, arguing rightly that this was a charge of treason, brought an action for libel against the paper and won his case. The charge of communicating information was not proved and the honourable and gallant member was awarded one farthing damages.

During the trial, facts of the greatest political interest were exposed, and the public has for the first time learned something of the activities which lead men to internment without trial—and a very remarkable record it is. It came out in the cross-examination of Capt. Ramsay that he was the founder of a club known as the Right Club which had a most distinguished membership. The prince of traitors, William Joyce, was a member. Tyler Kent, then clerk at the American Embassy, who is now serving seven years for stealing official papers, was not only a member but a close associate of Ramsay's. Anna Wolkoff, now in penal servitude for ten years, was a member and on Christian-name terms with Ramsay. The register of members was kept, not at the club headquarters or at Ramsay's house, but in Tyler Kent's room, because (so Ramsay very reasonably explained) the Jews were less likely to get at it there. Among the literature of the club was a poem published by Ramsay himself and distributed by him to casual fellow-passengers in buses. It was a parody of "Land of Hope and Glory" addressed to England, and it contained these lines:

Poorer still and poorer grow thy true-born sons;
Faster still and faster they're sent to feed the guns.

verse which was never meant—there is Capt. Ramsay's sworn word for this—to impair anybody's fighting spirit. A child's guide to patriotism ran:

A is for Army conscripted for France,
But even when it got there it couldn't advance.
G is for Germans.
H is for Hitler, their saviour and guide,
Who broke down Versailles and restored them their pride.

And no one could have been more greatly surprised than was Capt. Ramsay when it was suggested to him by counsel that these pamphlets indicate a leaning toward the enemies of Great Britain and a certain wistful hope for the defeat of Capt. Ramsay's native land.

Whatever he be—whether disloyal or patriotic, Fifth Columnist or honest independent politician—there is one thing that Capt. Ramsay undoubtedly and undeniably is. He is a complete fool. He was a fool when he mixed himself up with Anna Wolkoff and intrigued with a man whom he knew for a dishonest rogue. He was a fool when he published his poem and accepted the other pamphlets. He was a fool when he hid the club's papers from the police under the Stars and Stripes. Above all, he was a fool when he launched his action against the New York Times.

Anyone but a fool would have seen that, so long as he kept his mouth shut, internment without trial was the best thing that could happen to him. While he kept silence, the public and his decent-minded friends could know nothing of what he had done; he had in his favor the deep dislike of every Englishman for imprisonment without trial; and there was a chance of his surviving the war with a reputation speckled but not wholly blackened. By coming into court, he threw away every shred of hope that he might be reinstated and shut himself permanently from the company of decent men and women. There was no need for the gods to make a fool of Capt. Ramsay before ruining him. He saved them the trouble.

But if the man is such a fool, how comes he to be a member of Parliament? That is the question which must be burning into the mind of every Englishman who has been watching this astonishing scene and believes in the health and power of free institutions. How did Capt. Ramsay persuade the Peebles Conservative Association to adopt him and a majority of the Peebles electors to vote for him? Who's Who supplies the answer:—

Capt. Ramsay, M. P. for Peebles since 1931, o. s. of late Lieut.-Col. H. L. Ramsey, elder son of Gen. the Hon. Sir Henry Ramsay, K. C. I. E., C. B., m. Ismay Lucretia Mary, o. d. of Fourteenth Viscount Gormanston and widow of late Lord Ninian Crichton Stuart, M. P., Educ. Eton, R. M. C. Sandhurst, joined Second Battalion Coldstream Guards.

He is M. P. for Peebles because he comes of the right sort of family, because he married a daughter of the peerage and the widow of a very rich man, because he went to the right school and joined the right regiment. If his father had been a bank clerk and his wife the daughter of an insurance agent, if he had been educated at the local grammar school, gone with a scholarship to Oxford and made his way by his own brains to a moderate competence in a respectable trade or profession, then he might have bombarded every political association on the books of the Central Office for a constituency, and every time the odds against his getting into the House would have been 1000 to 1.

The fact that one unworthy person made his way into the House by virtue of his wealth and social position might not in itself be of much importance, and there is no evidence that Capt. Ramsay, as a fifth columnist, is not the one black sheep in a clean flock. But, unfortunately, in his capacity as a silly ass, he does not sit in the House alone. It is common knowledge—and many people can check it from their personal acquaintance—that the intellectual level of the House of Commons has been, since 1931, deplorably low; and when the historian of the future comes to write the story of the pre-war years one of the things he will need to bear in mind (if he is to read aright the disastrous record) is this intellectual poverty of the men chosen as the people's representatives, this profusion of men who at the very best can only be described, in the words of Jane Austen, as "persons of strong, natural, sterling insignificance." These tenth-rate nonentities who have been jobbed into the House of Commons because they were men of the "right type" provided just the background that the Front Bench required for its calamitous foreign policy and for its blindness to the danger in which the country stood. The government needed behind it a solid block of M. P.'s stupid enough to jeer at Mr. Churchill, to admire the moral grandeur of Stanley Baldwin and to applaud the foresight of Mr. Chamberlain; and the political bosses saw to it that the right men were provided in Capt. Ramsay and others of the same intellectual and social build. And if the historian gets to the heart of the matter he will put high on the list of those responsible for the present troubles the wire-pullers who chose a House of Commons with infinitely less sense of duty than a selection committee would feel in choosing an English fifteen for Twickenham. It will not be the shadow of an answer to say that the selection of trade unionists by seniority also filled the scanty benches opposite with mediocrities. Power lay on the Right; and there is a long score to settle with the men who put Capt. Ramsay and the like into Parliament.

Simple Truth About This War

PEGLER

MOST of us have been so busily and angrily involved in other interests, some of them quite personal and petty, that the simple truth about this war seems to have gone into eclipse.

The simple truth is that the master of the warlike German people decreed it, began it without the slightest moral or military provocation, inflicted it on unoffending and defenseless peoples and proclaimed in one reckless utterance that there was not room in this world for Hitlerism and Americanism.

Hitler strikes so fast and so often and with such appalling brutality that we are usually unable to recall the past in the contemplation of his latest assault.

He captured Austria without a struggle and received Czecho-Slovakia as a bribe to spare the world this war. But he broke the promise and then made a conspiracy with Josef Stalin whereby he was allowed to smash Poland and Stalin received certain cushion states. He had a treaty of friendship with Poland and Poland remained officially at peace without declaring war.

HITLER had made a great outcry against Jewishness and against bolshevism, but none of the nations which he has struck was Jewish and his strongest ally at the start and the one which gave him the signal to go ahead was Soviet Russia. Jews were only incidental in the populations of most of the assaulted countries and certainly Norway, Denmark, Holland and Belgium were not communistic and Britain was not even accused of Jewishness or bolshevism. Britain was described with a new term. Britain was a pluto-democracy and presently the United States was a pluto-democracy, too.

We seem to forget the details of Hitler's war which should be kept in mind, lest we fall into the terrible error of trusting him. The Norwegians had entertained many Germans hospitably as friends for years and had saved some of them from the diseases of malnutrition when they were hungry children after the first World War. These Germans had more or less grown up in Norwegian homes and were regarded almost as sons of the Norwegian families which had succored them. But Hitler sent them back as soldiers disguised in civilian clothes and sent other troops across concealed in the holds of cargo ships and suddenly struck this trusting friend the most despicable blow of all. It is hard to believe now that this could have happened, but we know it did.

HOLLAND and Belgium were next, both attacked treacherously by night and with no pretense of that honor which Hitler is always preaching to the German people. Two more friendly nations fell in the war on Jewishness and bolshevism, although Jewishness was negligible in both and Communist Russia was still Hitler's ally.

These more spectacular horrors impressed us more than Hitler's later assaults on Yugoslavia and Greece and, finally, his turn against Russia because, up to then, the mind of civilized men did not believe such things could happen. Thereafter instead of bearing in mind that of such a man and such a nation anything can be expected and the worst cannot even be imagined, we seem to have become dazed.

Even though German spies have been caught in activities which may eventually cost the lives of thousands of our people we regard their treacheries as casual misdemeanor and their trials as police court routine. Hitler would torture and execute spies caught in similar activities against him, but Americans aren't even interested, much less aroused.

HITLER armed for this war as no nation on earth except, perhaps, his ally, Russia, ever was armed before. War was his ambition from the beginning and Czecho-Slovakia was thrown to the wolves only because the British were caught unarmed and unready. Yet Hitler called the British warmongers and many of us, after persistent repetition, began to believe they were. We have even denounced as warmongers men in our own country who took alarm and belatedly began to arm the Nation. His words drug some who, nevertheless, hold themselves to be wise and practical patriots.

There is no mystery about the identity of the enemy. There is no doubt of his intention to reduce this country to the position of a second-rate partner, like France, in a Bolshevik world, there being no difference between bolshevism and Hitlerism except in the color of the shirt and the device on the banners.

Lest we forget, Hitler is the reason why the United States has had to drop every other work, suspend all progress and the reason why all those thousands of young American men have had to quit their homes, their jobs and school to learn to fight a war.

Ban of Banat and Russian Fliers Among Guests at Yugoslav Fete

Croatian Title of Dr. Subasich Intrigues Many at Legation Affair

By Carolyn Bell

Although used to exotic titles, Washington society had to admit defeat yesterday when confronted with the Ban of the Banat of Croatia, Dr. Ivan Subasich, who was among the honor guests at the party given at the Yugoslav Legation yesterday afternoon. The answer is simple, however, for Ban, when loosely translated, means governor (or a bit higher) and Banat, province. Dr. Subasich, a tall distinguished looking gentleman with graying hair, was the center of an interested group all afternoon.

The party, at which the Minister and Mme. Fotitch were hosts, was given in honor of vivid, Mme. Dobrila Simovich, who will leave shortly for London to join her husband, Gen. Dushan Simovich, Prime Minister of Yugoslavia, who is now in London. Mme. Simovich, who yesterday relieved her simple black dress with turquoise jewelry and a cluster of gardenias, has not seen her husband since she fled from Nazi-invaded Yugoslavia.

Mme. Fotitch was charmingly gowned in a beige frock with a cluster of pink-and-white lilies pinned at the neckline. In deference to the host, the Minister had donned white linens. They were introducing members of the royal Yugoslav government in exile who shared honors at the party. Mme. Subasich, wife of the Ban, wore a simple black frock and a cluster of roses. Minister Gogolju Jeftich was accompanied by Mme. Jeftich, who wore a black-and-white printed frock with a red belt. Also in the line were Dr. and Mme. Markovich, she looking smart in black, Frank Snoj and Sava Kosanovich.

An impromptu bar had been set up in the room between the drawing room and dining room. Here servants worked like mad to keep the sweltering guests supplied with liquid refreshments. Orange juice and Scotch and soda seemed most popular. Mrs. Cordell Hull, wearing a chic white bonnet with a green bird atop, chatted with first one diplomat and then another. Dr. Hu Shih, the Chinese Ambassador, held a veritable court of his own.

Soviet Envoy Brings Fliers

Making a late, but nevertheless exciting appearance, was the Soviet Ambassador, Constantine A. Oumansky, who had three Russian colonels in tow—and they turned out to be fliers of the group that just completed the spectacular flight on a special mission here.

Little Pola Fotitch, wearing a fetching red jumper, was allowed to come to the party. Accompanyher was an even smaller miss, Maria Radin, whose parents, the Special Representative of the Yugoslav Government in London and Mme. Radin, were not far away.

In the long, attractive dining room teas and ice cream were served along with sandwiches and cakes. The table was centered with a bouquet of flame gladioli and blue larkspur intermingled with white blossoms. The Brazilian Ambassador and Senhora de Martins were being greeted on all sides. Senhora de Martins wore a single cabbage rose on her tiny black hat and a black and white printed costume.

The Venezuelan Ambassador and Senora de Escalante were the envy of all who heard them discuss their air-conditioned embassy. Senora de Escalante was garbed in a chic black frock decked with black sequins. Mme. Oumansky, wife of the Soviet Ambassador, was telling of her one week's respite from Washington, at the seashore. Also sporting a nice tan was Mme. Hurban, wife of the Czech Minister, who wore a pale blue frock.

Mme. Burya Wears Blue

The Military Attache of the Embassy was accompanied by Mme. Burya whose frock was of robin's egg blue. Also from the embassy staff were Dr. Rybar, the counselor; the first secretary, Rastko Petrovich; the third secretary, Dr. Bozidar Sarich, and the attache, Bogdan Radista. Seeing that guests were well taken care of was tall and handsome Serge Krizman.

Reminiscing about parties they had been to in the legation—when it was Senator Bailey's residence—were Mrs. Edward Finkenstaedt and Mrs. Arthur Tirrell. Mrs. Finkenstaedt was smartly turned out in a black and red ensemble and Miss Dorothy Tirrell wore a flowered hat to complement her brown chiffon frock. Mrs. George Thorpe, in a green ensemble, chatted with Hugo Gouthier, of the Brazilian Embassy, and others there included the Chilean Ambassador and Senora de Michels, just back from Virginia, and Mrs. Walter Tuckerman.

SEEN HERE AND THERE: Diminutive Maj. Z. Pechkoff talking with an interested group . . . George Abell and Miss Carolyn Nash discussing Red Cross . . . the Portuguese Minister, Dr. Joao Antonio de Bianchi using his Japanese fan eneggetically . . . Mr. and Mrs. George Renchard, she in pale blue and white . . . Mrs. John Wiley talking with Jon Rosen, sculptor . . . Miss Pauletta Guffey wearing a lovely pink hat . . . Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Roper . . . Mme. Bruggmann in deep conversation with the tanned Danish Minister, Henrik Kauffmann . . . Mme. Bruggmann, who was smartly gowned in green and white, reports that her husband, the Minister of Switzerland, is expected back from Europe next week . . . Mrs. Carlton Holdrege chatting with Mrs. Emmanuel Lombard . . . Mme. Bilmanis and Mrs. J. J. Mack discussing the heat . . . and dozens of others.

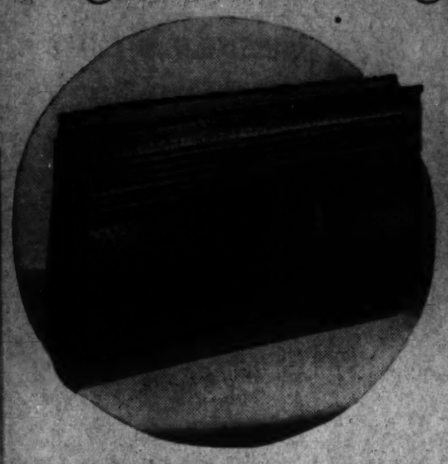
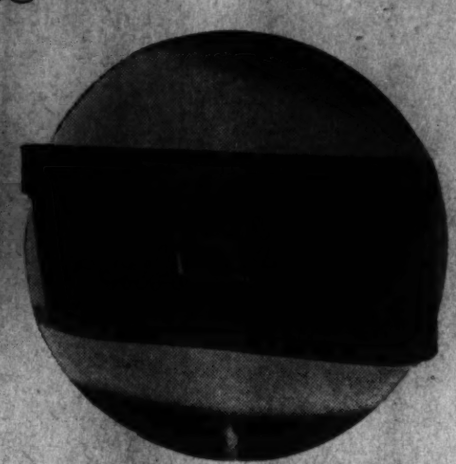
Motto in Fall Handbags Is the Bigger the Better

A touch of gold is the fall recipe for trimming on your new handbag. Gold decoration takes the form of shaggy asters on the frame of the Lewis bag, below, called "Black Gold." It is made of faille—just the fabric to carry you through the winter and into spring. The matching gold aster compact is so smart you will be changing it from bag to bag.



If you are tired of summer bags in which you could never find anything, you'll like the Rambler bag above. Its slogan is, "A place for everything, and everything in its place." Made of rough grain leather, it has double zippers and two side compartments. The colors are brown and black.



Suede, the all-purpose leather in the field of the underarm bag, is shown in the handbag above. This youthful envelope shape is smooth and smart in its slimness. Note the unusual clasp closing edged in gold. It is available in brown or black suede and leather.

Underarm Style Favored for This Season

By Jane Driscoll
The Post Fashion Editor

NEXT TO A PERKY feathered bonnet, there is nothing quite like a new handbag to make you feel "dressed to kill." And when it comes to selecting a style, you can let yourself go, for "the bigger the better" is the motto in bags.

Although top-handled bags are still a dependable style, the underarm shape is forecast as a fashion favorite for casual wear this season. But instead of being middle-sized, as of other years, it is going to be smashingly long and roomy. Top zippered and framed bags, envelope and vagabond shapes are already registering favor among these oblong underarm carry-alls.

In the dressier afternoon bag, the elongated silhouette promises to prevail, with the accent on softer styles. Shirring, draping and pleating are employed. Lucite and gold play an increasingly important part for decorating on the more formal styles. It appears on locks, zipper pulls, top bars and frames.

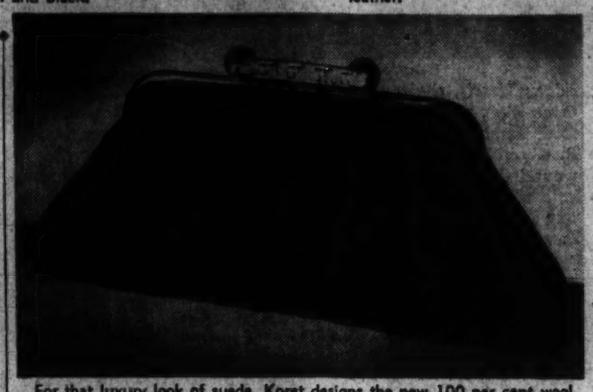
Many Fabrics Used

Broadcloth is the most used fabric, with faille running a close second in materials favored. Of the leathers, however, suede leads the field as an all-purpose bag for dress-up. Smooth calf is in favor earlier than usual, but the leather really having a heyday is alligator. It is seen mostly in companion sets to match alligator shoes.

While black seems to be the best seller color in bags, brown is considered very high style by fashionable women. Kona red and green with an olive cast are the two new colors being advanced in "accessory sets" with matching hats, shoes and gloves.

Match Bag to Your Height

If you have always had a yen for an oversized bag, do select one in proportion to your height. The blonde who is tall and willowy can afford to carry a bag that is two feet long. The petite or moderate size girl, however, should choose a somewhat smaller bag. Even small bags in keeping with the styles shown this year are larger than those ever before carried. When in doubt as to the proper shape to select, study the effect of bag-in-hand in a full-length mirror, before laying your money on the line.



For that luxury look of suede, Koret designs the new 100 per cent wool broadcloth bag above. More durable and lighter in weight than suede, the roomy cushion bag will not crack or get rubbed looking. Note that it has for trimming two of the season's smartest touches—gold and lucite.

Peach Shortcake

PEACHES ripe and golden are plentiful in all markets. They are delicious enough to eat straight, but "peaches and cream" is a combination almost unsurpassed. And by peaches and cream is meant a peach shortcake light as a feather, served oozing with thick, unbeaten cream.

To make the cake especially inviting it can be made in a ring mold and the center filled with fresh sliced peaches. This is the way to make it:

Peach Shortcake

Select firm, ripe, yellow peaches. Prepare them while the cake is baking. If you want them cold, peel, slice and sprinkle with water in which Frulite, a preparation made by adding such a tablet to water, then place in the refrigerator. This solution will retain the fruit's fresh coloring for several days.

Sift 1½ cups all-purpose flour, 2 teaspoons baking powder, 2 teaspoons sugar and ½ teaspoon salt together. Cut in 6 tablespoons butter. Beat 1 egg, and ½ cup milk and mix quickly with the dry ingredients. Pour into a well-oiled ring mold and bake in hot oven, 400 degrees for 25 minutes. Turn onto serving platter. Fill center with sliced peaches. Serve with cream. Serves 8.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Softly Swirled Bangs, Hats That Sweep Forward. Deftly Blended Face Powder, Artistic Eye Make-up And Radiant Smile Camouflage Over-Size Nose

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: The letter from "Unhappy Girl," published in your column of September 9, carried my thoughts back to a period in my adolescence when I, too, suffered from an identical obsession—namely, that my long nose spoiled the looks of my face, and that everyone who glanced my way was studying the feature. "Obsession" is exactly the word to describe my state of mind at that time. The fact that people occasionally teased me about my nose made matters worse. My mother, for instance, used to say, merrily, that long noses "ran in the family," and as a matter of fact, both mother and dad have big noses.

However, I finally brought myself around to a sensible viewpoint, by realizing that the nose was there to stay and it was up to me to be happy despite it. So I got a book on the subject of "making the most of your good points," and thereby minimizing your bad ones. The text was persuasive and gave many suggestions I found easy to follow. For one thing, it recommended (just as you did) "playing up" the eyes. Eyebrows were to be groomed to a clean, bold sweep, arching in toward the nose.

Darker powder for the nose than the rest of the face was one particularly helpful suggestion, which I immediately adopted and still employ. On my dressing table today, there is always a small box of suntan powder (alongside my big box of "natural" face powder), to be dusted on my nose as the final "makeup" touch. Having observed that the darker powder does make my nose look smaller, I actually feel as if it is smaller when I have thus camouflaged it!

I have also discovered that I can figuratively cut down the size of my nose (give the optical illusion of a smaller nose, I mean), by wearing a long, soft bang, swirled loosely across the upper brow. At first, I chose hats that swept forward over the face, thus giving a profile effect which overshadows the size of my nose. (And they are still my favorites). Eventually, though, after having trained my bang to "stay put," I was able to wear off-the-face hats with complete self assurance. And today, I have graduated to the turban-wearing stage!

I have gained confidence, too, by touching up my eye lashes with the tiniest bit of mascara. Realizing that daytime eye make-up can so easily be overdone, I exercise great restraint in the matter—and the effect is good, accenting the color and expression of my eyes; thus turning the beholder's attention away from my nose. And another thing that helps a lot is smiling. I have learned by studying the countenances of others that it is almost impossible to remember the features of the person whose face is lighted by a genuinely radiant smile. And if you feel, deep down inside, that you look pretty good, it is easy to smile.

And that is the purpose of all the "tricks" I have outlined above. They help you to feel that you look your best, which isn't too bad. And the result, in my case, is that every once in a while, somebody tells me I am pretty! And say, does that work wonders for the eyes and the smile! I hope these pointers may be as useful to "Unhappy Girl" as they have been to me.

Defects Don't Handicap Self-Confident People

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Your 15-year-old correspondent, who signs herself "Unhappy Girl," says she suffers intense self consciousness over her long nose. I, who am 16, feel a deep understanding of what she is going through. However, I am consoled by the discovery that most persons, if we give them a chance, grade us by other qualities than mere outward appearance.

While I am far from being a beauty, I have had the courage to learn from experience that social acceptance is 99 per cent due to complete self confidence. Anyone who acquires sufficient poise to look all beholders in the eye without blushing embarrassment need no longer worry about whatever physical defects he may have.

For instance, I happen to know a very attractive girl who is crippled, yet exceedingly popular, for the simple reason that she seems completely unaware of her lameness and has a delightful personality. Also, I know a boy who definitely "has a way" with girls—yet he wears glasses and his eyes are two different colors!

In both cases, these physical shortcomings never make the slightest unfavorable impression upon the beholder, because of the happy self confidence of the person concerned. Their example has taught me that "looks" are no excuse for being lonely or friendless. So I, who might have committed myself to a wall flower's role, on account of having no beauty to speak of, have shown myself friendly to every comer, with the result that I have many friends of both sexes and am as popular as any girl needs to be.

Therefore, my advice to "Unhappy Girl" is this: Look your friends and acquaintances in the eye with a happy smile of self confidnece and you will have smooth sailing after that if there should happen to be anyone who can't see beyond your longish nose, just remember that he (or she) is too dimwitted to be worth knowing. He (or she) definitely has no place in your circle of friends. Here's wishing you the best of luck.

Throat Exercise Begins at 30; Head Posture Also Important

By Ida Jean Kain

ONCE PAST 30 it takes more than good posture to keep your throatline young. You have to exercise for muscle tone, apply creams for a soft, smooth skin, and call on your will power until this extra care acquires the force of habit.

On the average, the throat muscles do not get anything like enough exercise. And, since seven-eighths of the throat column is muscle, it is only natural that such neglect speeds up the sagging—or ageing—process. But, although no part of the figure deteriorates more rapidly from the lack of exercise, a comparatively small amount will suffice to keep it young.

Before we get any deeper into throatline calisthenics, however, let's take up the matter of creams as lubricants and wrinkle discouragers. It seems to be especially helpful to cleanse the throat thoroughly with cream and to leave on a thin film while exercising. Afterwards remove all trace of the cream and splash the neck and chin with cold water. Friction and massage are also beauty aids. In massaging, apply plenty of cream to hands and throat, and work from the base of the throat upward, separating hands just under the chin, then working outward along the jawline. When you have finished, use cold water as an astringent.

There is a secret to exercising the throat muscles effectively and this is it: Slowly tense all muscles as the movements are performed, maintain the tension throughout the movement, and, afterward, slowly but completely relax the muscles.

Here is a good throat exercise: Tip the head back, open the mouth to capacity, then, resisting strongly with the muscles of the lower jaw, close. Repeat three times and make sure that you observe the rule for tensing and relaxing.

Another good one is to tip the head slowly backward and circle slowly around from one shoulder to the other, as if you were watching a fast-circling plane. Continue for three revolutions, all throat muscles tensed, then straighten and slowly relax.

Strenuous and Good

It so happens that one of the most strenuous chain and throat exercise is also one of the best. You lie on your back on the bed, crossways, with head lowered over the side. Tense throat muscles so slowly raise head until it is in line with the spine, hold for a second, and slowly lower and relax. This may be repeated six times, with pauses at intervals.

This extra beauty care is recommended to any woman who has always trusted to posture to maintain a clear, youthful throatline. But for you a better head carriage may be the starting point. Unless you carry your head high, with throat stretched and chin level, you may have to concentrate on such simple measures as working with your neck muscles supporting your head so that it does not go forward, and in sleeping without a pillow, and in doing alignment exercises.

Regency Furniture

The English Regency covered that period from 1811 to 1820, when George IX acted as regent for the insane George III. The regency styles grew out of those we familiarly know as Georgian, but they were strongly influenced by the Empire styles of France, reflecting the revival of interest in Roman, Egyptian and Greek architecture and design. Hence its chairs are rather robust versions of Directoire and Empire chairs, the cupboards and cabinets often have metal grills in place of glass in the doors. The most familiar wood, while black lacquered finwood, while bluack lacquered finish lined with gold was also popular.

Newswomen To Honor Wallis Windsor

The Duchess of Windsor will be honored at a tea by the Women's National Press Club at the Willard Hotel September 23 during the 24-hour visit of the Duke and Duchess in Washington.

It will be an "at-long-last" occasion, for it will be the local newspaper women's first close-up of one of the most written-about women of the day.

This party is expected to be one of only a few which the royal visitors will be able to attend, due to the shortness of their stay and to the fact that elaborate entertainment is being dispensed with by the British royal family during the war.

The Duke and Duchess will stay overnight at the British Embassy, while on their way from the Bahamas, where he is governor, to his ranch in Alberta, Canada.

Democratic Women's Council To Meet Monday

The Democratic Women's National Council will hold its first fall meeting at 8 p. m. Monday at the Willard Hotel, with the new president, Mrs. Charles McLean Murray, in charge.

At Red Cross Open House

Edgar Morris, chairman of the District Red Cross Roll Call committee, yesterday greeted Rosalynd Williams, 5, of Oxford, England, at the open house at the Walsh mansion. Rosalynd's father, an officer in the British army, was wounded at Dunkerque. Rosalynd is shown modeling a knitted suit such as Red Cross workers are making for little war sufferers. Rosalynd and her mother, Mrs. Horace Williams, with her in the above picture, have been in this country ten months

D. C. Red Cross Is Hive Of Defense Activity

By Lucia Giddens

By making one complete circuit of the busy rooms at the Walsh Mansion yesterday afternoon, visitors glimpsed a sizable sample of the scope of work done by the District Chapter of the American Red Cross.

Women were rolling bandages, donors were giving blood to the Army-Navy Blood Plasma Bank, home nursing and nurses' aide demonstrations were in progress.

Rossalynd Williams, 5, of Oxford, England, whose father was wounded at Dunkirk, modeled a little brown knitted suit, such as Washington women are knitting by the dozens to be sent to children overseas.

The open house of the District Chapter yesterday served as in introduction to the Red Cross roll call, which opens here September 22.

Edgar Morris, chairman of the roll call committee, and Brig. Gen. F. R. Keefer, chairman of the District Chapter, greeted guests at the door of the Walsh mansion on Massachusetts Avenue.

On the lawn, a first aid demonstration was given by Red Cross workers, and the motor corps manned an ambulance drawn up at the door.

At the Blood Plasma Bank, Robert D. McMillen, 24, a magazine writer, came to give blood for the sixth time. Among the three women who came for the same purpose yesterday was one who was making her third donation.

In a nearby room the nurses' aide corps, which will start a series of civilian defense courses later this month, presided over the bed of Frances Rowan, 10, Junior Red Cross member. Frances, a pupil at Potomac School, was pretending to be a convalescent just for the demonstration. In pink pajamas, she was spending several hours in bed. "I'll get ice cream when it's over," she said smiling.

Miss Caroline E. Thomson, director of home nursing for the District Chapter, demonstrated improvised equipment at the bedside of another volunteer "patient," Ruth Jones, 13, Langley Junior High School student.

A washboard for a back-rest and a bed table made from an orange crate were among the inexpensive equipment which Miss Thomson showed.

Musicians from the Navy Band played on the stair landing opposite the huge Red Cross flag which floated from the ceiling. Downstairs canteen corps workers in blue uniforms served orange punch and cakes.

Otto S. Lund, manager of the District Chapter, was proudly giving statistics on the energy of Red Cross workers to visitors. During August, he said, 4111 volunteer workers put in more than 93,000 hours.

Mrs. William H. Pouch, president general of the D. A. R., heads the patriotic societies' representatives' committee which is seeking descendants of the heroes dramatized on the weekly programs.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Klutz

Collective Bargaining Opposed for AFGE

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 10.—Chairman Ramspeck of the House Civil Service Committee today told the ninth A. F. G. E. convention here that it was a "tragic mistake" that would "eventually lead to the destruction of the civil service system" for Federal employes to demand the right to bargain collectively.

He said he was concerned over the fact that one Federal employe organization was advocating the right to collective bargaining. Ramspeck didn't name names, but the United Federal Workers of America, the C. I. O. affiliate, has been denouncing Labor Secretary Perkins on the charge that she has refused to bargain collectively.

Ramspeck cited a statement made by President Roosevelt several years ago which he said every employe union should follow closely as a matter of policy. Ramspeck quoted the President as follows: "All Government employes should realize that the process of collective bargaining as usually understood cannot be transplanted into the Government service. Militant tactics have no place among Government employes and such action is unthinkable and intolerant."

The Georgia legislator, who has proved himself to be a friend of the Federal worker, repeated his belief that Federal salaries must be raised to take care of the rising cost of living if Congress fails to control prices. "I don't know what form the legislation should take," Ramspeck said. "It might be necessary to do what was done during the last war; that is, to give a $20 a month increase to each employe."

The convention today finally disposed of the troublesome problem that has tied it up for the past two days, the election of the 14 vice presidents. It voted 9463 to 8067 to retain the present method of electing the vice presidents at large. A bloc of delegates from the field tried to put over a constitutional amendment that would have required elections by districts.

Custodial delegates haven't yet been appeased and it's anyone's guess whether some of them will walk out of the convention tomorrow as has been threatened. They are demanding representation on the executive council. The constitution committee is debating a resolution which would allow the custodial workers to withdraw from the A. F. G. E. and establish another union within the A. F. of L. The latest report is that the custodial bloc will put up a candidate against A. F. G. E. James Burns. If that happens, it will be only a gesture as no candidate can defeat Burns.

The convention recommitted another proposed constitution change which would have given the executive council authority to establish more than one lodge in a Federal agency. Fred Fraser, chairman of the District council, fought the proposal by suggesting the plan might be used to discipline him by establishing another lodge within the Veterans Administration. He has bucked the administration group from Washington and he will oppose Vice President Carroll Dimond for reelection. Vice President James Yaden assured Fraser that no attempt would be made to establish a second lodge within the Veterans Administration.

Treasurer Charles T. Hoffman had the pleasure of informing the delegates that the A. F. G. E. was in the black. The union has a surplus of nearly $16,000 and it's the first time in five years that it has operated in the black despite the fact that the revenue for the year ended June 30, 1941, was $97,000, which was nearly $8000 under the income of 1940. Officers will be elected tomorrow and the convention is expected to end.

Catoe's Counsel Gets 5 Days More for Plea

Attorneys for Jarvis Catoe, confessed sex killer of six women, were granted five more days to file technical pleas by Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue yesterday.

Catoe is scheduled for trial in the District Court on October 15, on one of the five Washington murders for which he was indicted last week.

Forgetfulness Costs $25

Forgetting a District Court jury summons yesterday cost Thomas D. Tebbs $25. Tebbs, an accountant, 1333 Ionquil Street Northwest, was brought in by marshals. He said he had been carrying the summons for some time. He was so busy he overlooked it. Justice Jennings Bailey gave him a choice of paying $25 or spending 10 days in jail.

Youngsters' Paradise

2 Lost Chaps Find It Fun To Visit With Policemen

IN COMMAND—Jackie Brown, 5, of Hyattsville, Md., takes over the desk sergeant's post at the Thirteenth Precinct. He wasn't in the lost department very long before the family maid came to take him home

It's not so bad to get lost when you can go to a police station and put your feet on the desk and wear a policeman's hat and get lots of attention.

To top it off, your folks are so glad to see you when you get home that you feel you must surely be the fair-haired boy.

That's what two small boys decided yesterday.

James Bernard, 6, of 5632 Conduit Road Northwest, got lost in the pursuit of higher learning, or rather returning from it. Just enrolled in the first grade of St. Stephen's School, he was being escorted home by a schoolmate who lives next door, Barbara Jean Marceron, 10, when the adventure began. "He just broke away from me and ran," Barbara said.

About 4 p. m., police found the boy, bewildered, at Wisconsin Avenue and M Street Northwest and took him to the Seventh Precinct Station, where he had a delightful time until his foster mother, Mrs. G. T. LaScola, got in touch with police and came to claim him.

Five-year-old Jackie Brown, of Hyattsville, Md., had lost his way to a candy store when police found him wandering in the 2100 block of H Street Northwest. His Negro nurse, Lulu Bele, had brought him into Washington and given him a penny to buy candy while she visited friends, police reported later.

At the Thirteenth Precinct Station, Jackie had a question of his own for every question asked by police, but they finally learned his name and before long Lulu Belle came and got him.

It's not so bad to get lost. In fact, it's a heck of a lot of fun.

Missing Girl Returns Home

A search for 15-year-old Jo Ann Weddell ended last night when the comely blonde returned to her home at 5209 Kansas Avenue Northwest after a three-day absence.

The girl declined to tell where she had been, police said. Daughter of George B. Weddell, a Social Security Board auditor, she disappeared Monday afternoon from St. Gertrude's School of Arts and Crafts, 4801 Sargent Road Northeast, where she was a boarding pupil.

Still missing last night was Alberta Norris, of 3405 Baker Street, Hyattsville, Md., who disappeared Saturday.

Double-Shift Schedules Expected in Several Schools

Acting Schools Superintendent Robert L. Haycock told the Board of Education yesterday that it was almost certain increased attendance at Anacostia and Benning elementary schools this fall would necessitate adoption of double shift schedules at some of them.

Largely responsible, he said, is the huge Bellevue housing project for Navy Yard workers and the influx of defense workers elsewhere in the area. A small measure of relief will be afforded by the transfer of two portables to Benning School and two to Stanton School, he reported.

Although Haycock did not estimate how many schools would be required to divide attendance into two daily shifts, school authorities expected one, and possibly two, would be affected, depending on the volume of registration.

The Anacostia Junior-Senior High Schol already is on the double-shift system, as is Browne Junior High School. Continuation of the system at Browne, where one group attends classes from 8 a. m. to 12:15 p. m. and another from 12:30 to 4:15 p. m., was approved by the board.

Plans for registration of Benning and Anacostia pupils next week will be announced in a few days.

Meeting for the first time in the new school year, the board declined to modify the high school cadet uniform by making a blouse optional.

"Let's find out what the parents think before we act," said Dr. James A. Gannon, board member, and his suggestion was followed despite a strong recommendation by Dr. Chester W. Holmes, assistant schools superintendent, that the "optional blouse" rule be adopted.

Dr. Gannon said he had received numerous protests against "tampering" with the present cadet uniform and that elimination of compulsory purchase of a blouse might have unfortunate consequences.

For instance, he said, pupils from prosperous families would wear the blouses while others might have to go without.

Dr. Holmes said the blouseless uniform would cost parents only $10.39, compared with $22.69 for the present outfit.

Appointment of J. M. Riecks, Mrs. M. V. Eichner and Miss D. W. Frazier as assistant principals of Deal, Paul and Shaw Junior High Schools, respectively, was approved by the board. All are members of faculties of the respective schools.

The board also approved a new tuition scale for nonresident pupils, providing increases at the teachers' colleges and senior and junior high schools, and decreases at the vocational, elementary, summer and night schools. The schedule ranges from $262.60 a year at the teachers colleges to $4.30 at summer school.

A recommendation by Acting Supt. Haycock that the 13 teachers and one supervisor who conducted the instruction program for the shut-in children last year, under auspices of the Board of Public Welfare, be permitted to carry on under the Board of Education through next June was approved.

Meantime, the teachers' colleges will be asked to set up certain standards which these home teachers must meet, and examinations will be held toward the end of the school year to establish an eligible list for permanent appointments.

Early Signs Point To Successful Chest Campaign

Community Chest officials yesterday called the two million dollar goal of the campaign set for November 13 to 27 as "vitally necessary for increasingly-needed social services" here and said prospects were hopeful for success in the drive.

"This is a welfare goal which an increasingly prosperous Washington should take in its stride," J. Clifford Folger, general campaign chairman, declared.

Coleman Jennings, Chest president, said results of campaigns already held by the organization in the spring and summer in other cities cast a hopeful forecast for success in the forthcoming drive. Herbert L. Willett, director of the Chest, also spoke.

Hail Roosevelt In Walter Reed

G. Hall Roosevelt, brother of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, was a patient last night in Walter Reed Hospital.

Hospital attaches said his condition was not critical, but would not announce what ailment he suffered. Roosevelt was transferred to Walter Reed this morning from the Vassar Hospital, in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., near Hyde Park, after he reportedly suffered internal hemorrhages.

It was reported his condition had been considered serious in Poughkeepsie, and that he was sent to the large Army hospital for examination and diagnosis, as well as treatment.

Walter Reed officers, however, said that his name did not appear on their "critical list" and that Roosevelt had received "a few visitors" since entering the hospital.

D. C. Court Bill Action Promised

McCarran Tells Bar Delegation Merger Measure Isn't 'Going to Sleep'

Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat) of Nevada, chairman of the District Committee, yesterday promised a delegation of leaders of District bench and bar that the court consolidation bill "is not going to sleep" in the Senate.

McCarran's promise to move the measure along "as rapidly as Senate conditions permit" followed a declaration from Chief Justice D. Lawrence Groner of the District Court of Appeals, that congestion in the United States District Court here amounts to "almost a scandal."

Enactment of legislation merging the present Police and Municipal courts into a single court which would have jurisdiction over many civil suits now tried in District Court would materially relieve congestion in the higher tribunal, Chief Justice Groner said.

The bill would raise the jurisdiction of the merged court to $2000 from the $1000 limitation of the present Municipal Court. Justice Groner said he would "prefer" to see the new court authorized to try cases involving claims up to $3000.

5000 to 6000 Untried Cases

District Court, said the jurist, "is loaded down with a burden of from five to six thousand untried cases."

"Despite all I can do, despite all that any one can do," he continued, "the court is at least a year and a half behind. That means that a litigant must wait a year and a half before his case is brought to trial, which is almost a scandal, in my opinion."

"The bill," said Justice Groner, "cannot fail to improve the administration of justice in the District" and, he declared, there "can't be any reasonable, sensible objection" to it.

Justice Groner suggested many perfecting amendments to the measure, some of which would bring the administrative machinery of the new court in line with Federal practice, but none of the changes would materially alter major provisions.

Other jurists and leading members of the District Bar Association joined Justice Groner in indorsement of the bill. Associate Justice Justin Miller, of the Court of Appeals, called unanimity of support for the bill "remarkable."

D. C. Bills Approved

Others attending the conference with Senator McCarran included Judge George C. Aukam and Judge Ellen K. Raedy, of Municipal Court; Judge John P. McMahon and Judge Walter J. Casey, of Police Court; E. Barrett Prettyman, bar association president; John J. Carmody, Harlan Wood and Lawrence Koenigsberger, representing bar association committees, and Walter F. Bramhall, police court clerk.

Before the conference the District Committee approved bills to make industrial accident prevention a function of the District Minimum Wage Board, to require adequate reserves of companies insuring taxicab operators, and to permit out-of-town sightseeing companies to operate 30 days a year here without payment of license fee.

In the face of objections from certain civic organizations the committee ordered subcommittee hearings on a bill rewriting and broadening the present eight-hour-day law for women workers. The subcommittee is comprised of Senator Hughes (Democrat), of Delaware, chairman, and Senators Clark (Democrat), of Idaho, and Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire.

Also delayed for subcommittee action was a bill to pay public school custodians for services in keeping schools open during Selective Service registration last October.

Citizens Unit Asks More Drastic Law On Degeneracy

The Rhode Island Avenue Citizens Association last night recommended changes in the law against indecent exposure which would make an offender liable to a fine of $1000 or one year imprisonment or both.

More than 350 persons attended the meeting of the association which was held jointly with the Brookland-Woodridge Business Men's Association in the Sherwood Presbyterian Church Hall at Twenty-second Street and Rhode Island Avenue Northeast.

The association also went on record in favor of a rat control program in the District. A group of 21 persons were admitted to membership.

Walter Bastian, former president of the District Bar Association, spoke on the forthcoming Red Cross Roll Call.

Woman Claims Attack Attempt in Her Home

Police last night were investigating the reported attempted criminal assault of a 50-year-old white woman at her home in the 200 block D Street Northwest, yesterday.

The victim said she was asleep in a first-floor bedroom when a man, either a swarthy white man or a Negro, climbed through a window. She attempted to run from the room, but he grabbed her by the throat and threw her on the bed. He attempted to rape her, she reported. Her screams apparently frightened the intruder, she said, and he fled through the window.

She described her assailant as 35 to 40, 5 feet, 8 inches tall, weighing between 140 and 150 pounds. He was wearing a light tan or a gray hat, light pants and a light shirt, she stated.

Police summoned a doctor from Casualty Hospital and the woman was treated for fingernail scratches to her neck. She later was taken to Gallinger Hospital for examination.

Man Accused Of Sex Crime Free on Bail

Discovering that a man indicted on a charge of ravishing a 6-year-old girl was free on $2000 bond, the district attorney's office acted swiftly yesterday to have him locked up without bail until he can be brought to trial. The trial is now scheduled for September 29.

Last April 26, a Negro mother told the police that her child had been outraged by a man who lured her into an automobile and took her into a woods near Union Market, east of New York Avenue.

Within an hour officers arrested Frank W. Jacobs, 43, a Government worker. The officers declared the child picked Jacobs as her assailant, from a line-up of five men at the First Precinct Station.

Police Judge John P. McMahon held Jacobs to the grand jury on May 2, fixing the bail at $2000, which Jacobs posted. He remained free on this bond after being indicted on May 13 on a charge of carnal knowledge, which carries the death penalty if the trial jury sees fit.

Trial was set down for June, but several postponements were allowed. The fact that Jacobs has been at liberty came to the attention of Assistant District Attorney Bernard Margolius yesterday. Within an hour, with the approval of Acting District Attorney John W. Fihelly, Margolius filed a motion to revoke the bail. This is scheduled for hearing in the District Court tomorrow.

"This man's bond ought to be revoked and he should be placed in jail immediately," said Margolius. "First, because the indictment charges a capital offense. Second, the evidence is overwhelming, and a man against whom there is such a charge, supported by such evidence, simply ought not to be at large.

"Doubtless, the setting of a $2000 bond in the Police Court was proper, but it was continued after indicement only through an oversight, which this office acted to correct as soon as it came to our attention."

D. C. Amateurs Give Preview Of Shows for Army Camps

A group of young Washington entertainers who have volunteered their talents for national defense ran skillfully through their paces last night in a preview of the shows they will put on at a number of Army camps. The production was staged and directed by Phil Hayden.

In some 20 acts put on at Central High School, they moved through a repertoire of singing, dancing and comedy acts that often equaled the efforts of entertainers on Washington's professional stages.

Refreshing to the audience was the novel presentation the young performers applied to well-known and much performed numbers, for instance: five young dancers toetapped to the classic Volga Boatmen but with a stepped-up tempo. The following girls were in this number: Fern Almquist, Shirley Baker, Betty Bigelow, Margaret Leggett, Datha Dearing and Dolores Rosenblatt.

Also much applauded was the singing of Margaret Riseling and Betty Bigelow wth their rendition of "Yours." The former also appeared in a chorus assisting the duet of Dotty Spangler and Vivian Nickolson in a "Hawaiian Nights" musical number.

Miss Jean Cavanaugh, the "Miss Washington" who placed third in the recent national beauty contest at Atlantic City, was introduced to the audience.

Kelly Drops 'Spy Unit' In Shakeup

Hartman Reassigned; Outfit Had Been Accused of Informing On Other Officers

Disbandment of a special investigations squad with the transfer of un-American and subversive investigations to an enlarged Public Relations Squad was announced yesterday by Maj. Edward J. Kelly, superintendent of police.

At the same time Major Kelly revealed that Acting Captain Earl P. Hartman, chief of the special squad, will be reassigned this week to a police precinct for duty as a lieutenant.

It was Hartman's 20-man squad which, other police officials told a recent House committee investigating police, was used as a unit to spy upon patrolmen. The committee was told the squad injured the morale of the Police Department.

Eight men of the special squad received transfer orders effective at 8 a. m. today. Three of them—Precinct Detective John Layton and Privates Louis M. Snyder and Robert Kirby—were ordered to duty on the new Subversive Activity Unit. The others were sent to precincts. They are: Privates Eugene Watson and Sherman Westrick to the Seventh Precinct; Robert L. Fort, Eighth Precinct; Stanley Abrahamson, First Precinct, and Oscar J. Johnson, Second Precinct.

Reassignment of the remaining 11 men on Hartman's squad will take place probably by the end of the week, Maj. Kelly indicated. He said these men have been working as alcohol beverage control inspectors and on gambling complaints.

Kelly said he is attempting to have the ABC work turned over to civilian inspectors.

Transfer of all subversive investigations to the Public Relations Squad places the work under the supervision of Inspector Richard H. Mansfield, chief of detectives, Kelly declared.

Lieut. Horace Lineburg, present chief of the squad, will remain in direct command of the work. He previously conducted the investigations before Lieut. Hartman was placed in charge by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, former police chief.

Two other policemen, Precinct Detective Lester Rank and Joseph D. Loughrin, Seventh Precinct, were added to Lieut. Lineburg's squad, bringing to five the number of subversive activity probers.

Maj. Kelly emphasized the fact that the change adds three additional men to the foot patrol force in the precincts.

Members of the new squad—Layton, Rank, Snyder, Kirby and Loughran—will work exclusively on reports of un-American activities.

'When Ladies Meet' They Do So Politely, If Wordily

Joan Crawford, Greer Garson and Robert Taylor Costar in New Screen Version Opening This Morning at the Palace

Substituting for Nelson B. Bell

"WHEN LADIES MEET." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the play by Rachel Crothers, adapted to the screen by S. K. Lauren and Anita Loos, costarring Joan Crawford, Robert Taylor and Greer Garson, with Herbert Marshall, Spring Byington, Rafael Storm and Mona Barrie. Directed by Robert Z. Leonard. Previewed Tuesday afternoon. At the Palace Theater.

"WHEN LADIES MEET," Rachel Crothers' observant comedy, has been filmed for a second time by M.-G.-M. Joan Crawford, Greer Garson, Robert Taylor and Herbert Marshall are the topflight leads in this handsome production, whose chief fault is a stifling verbosity. It opens this morning at the Palace.

GREER GARSON

For all that, "When Ladies Meet" is tailor-made for the ladies' trade. It discusses—and at great length, however repetitiously—the beguiling problem of two beautiful women battling for the love of a male. Its outcome is discreet and noble. Its splendid settings by Cedric Gibbons will set the housewife to thinking. And its fancy clothes, as worn by the Misses Crawford and Garson, should knock the pins from under the sturdiest budget.

Miss Crothers' original story was polite, slight and amusing. It concerned the lady novelist who had gotten her heroine into a snarl by letting her fall in love, and nobly, with a married man. The situation parallels her own affair with her married publisher. Through the devising of her true love, an honest newspaper man, she meets her boy friend's wife and, not knowing who she is, discusses with her her kindly, fictional problem. Then the husband walks in. This Situation is handled in a Civilized Manner.

Adaptation Holds Closely to Original Play

In their adaptation S. K. Lauren and Anita Loos have followed the original play closely, a little too closely, one suspects from the static quality of the film as a whole. When once they break away from the line of the story, as they do, for example, in the boating sequence with Miss Garson and Taylor, the result is lively and amusing. But when the camera hammers away at Miss Crawford arguing with herself and others about that troublesome last chapter, the effect is that of a photographed stage play—exactly what a moving picture should not be. This telling is nowhere near so amusing as was the 1933 picturization, in which Myrna Loy, Ann Harding, Robert Montgomery, Frank Morgan and Alice Brady had the leading roles. One suspects that the reason for this is its length. The new version is 1 hour and 42 minutes long. The earlier film was nearly a half-hour shorter.

Of the players, Greer Garson, as the wife, is the most fetching. Always a beautiful woman, she has a further quality of gentleness that enhances the credibility of the piece enormously. Robert Taylor, too, is fine, remarkably so, in the Montgomery role, being lively and likable. Miss Crawford does all that anyone can with the rather tiresome role of the novelist, hampered by her Professional Problem. Herbert Marshall, as the gentleman in question, is thoroughly miscast, probably because of Hollywood's never-ending lack of leading men.

Spring Byington is amusing enough as the dim-witted hostess, the role she created on the stage and which Alice Brady had in the first filming.

Also on the Palace screen is a Carey Wilson Miniature in sepia tint about the phantom gold in California's Death Valley. Whether the gold's there or not, it's interesting speculation. A color cartoon, "Little Cesario," and the News of the Day complete the program, a bill that's just the thing for the tired housewife who wants a little precarious suffering. Sophocles couldn't have done it more thoroughly.

Columbia

"Life Begins for Andy Hardy," most popular of all 11 Hardy Family films, will continue its F Street showings today, moving overnight from the Capitol to the Columbia.

The first picture in Loew's Capitol history to play two weeks, this M. G. M. release presents Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland, Lewis Stone, Fay Holden and the rest of the Hardy family, and two newcomers.

Patricia Dane, lovely 'Ziegfeld Girl' has an excellent role as the New York secretary who introduces Andrew to life in the big city. Ray MacDonald, youthful stage star, also makes his debut, appearing as Andy's roommate.

"Candle in the Wind" Will Blow This Way Soon

HEDDA HOPPER

This Villain Takes to Domesticity

Hollywood, Calif., Sept. 10.—Doesn't seem quite right somehow that George Sanders, who has played so many villians, should have settled down into family domesticity. The lady's name was Elsie Larson, a former Hollywood high school girl. Their romance first started when George arrived here, and the fact's been many times commented on that George was never seen in a night club or any of the places Hollywood hangs out. He was reluctant to admit his marriage. Maybe he wants to keep his villainy intact.

BETTE DAVIS

If Bette Davis plays the small part of Cassandra in "King's Row," the pat on the back will go to Producer Hal Wallis, who had foresight enough to realize that even a small part, if powerful enough, can give a star a greater standing than many longer ones. Bette's dying to do it, and won't even consider it one of her regular pictures. Sam Wood declares he'll have no one else. Sam's been pretty fine all through "King's Row." First he was promised Ty Power, then didn't get him. Then when they settled on Bob Cummings, that postponement cost Sam $25,000. Now with Bob shuffling back and forth between Deanna Durbin's "It Started With Adam" and "King's Row," Sam's not had an easy time. I'd say he deserves Bette.

After 16 years, Slim Talbot, Gary Cooper's standin, has washed up here. Slim and Coop were cowhands in Montana. They came down to Hollywood together. Year after year Slim hoped to get a break, but never got beyond standing in. He's going to Eugene, Oreg., to ride herd as foreman on a cattle ranch.

I hope all this comment anent George Montgomery and Ginger Rogers won't spoil a beautiful friendship. After all, they've known each other two and a half weeks, and even for this town, that's a little soon to predict marriage. Then, too, George has terrific responsibilities. He's one of 15 children. He's just bought a home for his parents, a sister and brother. Even though he's been in lots of pictures, he hasn't yet done a major production. I'll never know why, 'cause he's one of the handsomest, nicest boys I've met in a long time. Yes, Ginger motored back from Oregon with him.

Ann Miller had better watch out or she'll be bald-headed. In the past two months she's changed that jet black hair of hers to red, then became a blond. Her pals now call her "Rainbow Miller" . . . Mme. Ouspenskaya tells me that in "Shanghai Gesture" she'll play Mme. Sojo Maha and will speak not one word. Is Von Sternberg working backward to the old technique?

It isn't everyone who can turn calamity into good fortune as Sam Goldwyn seems able to do. When his picture "Nana" opened, it was during a blizzard. "Kid from Spain" made its debut the day the banks closed. There was a taxi strike on in New York when they unreeled "Thomas Candles." And last week, while New York was enjoying a deluge, "Little Foxes" broke a six-year record at the Music Hall.

A Watticism, Lucille?

New York, Sept. 10.

PAUL LUKAS: Lucille Watson, who is appearing with you in "Watch on the Rhine," was introduced to Dorothy Parker, with whom she discussed the literary notables of the day. "There are many writers," said Miss Watson, "who always are linked, by the public, with one well-known line or phrase they've written. It usually isn't the best phrase they've written, but that's the phrase with which the public always associates them . . . Now tell me, Mrs. Parker, is that true in your case? . . ."Unfortunately, it is," said Dorothy . . . "What's the line?" asked Miss Watson . . . Dorothy cited the famous couplet: "Men seldom make passes, At girls who wear glasses" . . . Miss Watson hesitated, and then said, "Go on . . ."

VICTOR MATURE

LEON HENDERSON: The Hollanders are sending these recipes to American friends who inquire about their meals: We first take our meat ration cards, roll them into the flour coupons, and then put them both into the fat card. We boil it on the coal card, to a gentle brown. Into that we then put our butter card, and bring it to a simmer with the petroleum coupons. We mix our ersatz-coffee card with the milk and sugar coupons, and into that we dip our bread card . . . We then wash the dishes with our soap card, and dry them with the textile coupons."

MOSS HART: Victor Mature, who now is in Hollywood, is singing the praises of Broadway and the season he spent with "Lady in the Dark." The self-critical matinee idol confesses: "As a result of this experience in the theater, my face now has that lived-in look" . . . Academy of Letters: Mark Hellinger, the Broadway columnist who now is an eminent Hollywood producer, has Aldous Huxley working for him. "It's incongruous," said Mark, "but it's nice" . . . Ambassador Oumansky: The list of technicians who will comprise the American mission to Moscow is entirely different now—different than the names the President listed ten days ago.

J. EDGAR HOOVER: Harry Bridges, who insists that the G-men tapped his telephone wire at the Hotel Edison, didn't pay his full hotel bill when he checked out—and invited the management to sue him for the balance . . Bridges paid for the food he had consumed while he lived there, but refused to pay for the room and the telephone calls he had made. "I won't pay those items," he explained, "because I didn't have the exclusive use thereof."

H. C. HOPSON: Willard Thorp, the cotrustee of your Associate Gas & Electric Co. who was Harry Hopkins' economic-adviser, will tell the University of Chicago this week: "Big Business is threatened with the evils with which he has come to associate the word 'Bureaucracy'" Variety: Alexander Ince—whose ill fated Stage magazine was the finest in the field—will revive its publication this season . . . Maj. George Fielding Eliot: Returning correspondents report that Hitler has three of his best divisions ready to keep the Italian army from the Russian front . . . N. V. A.: Smith & Dale, who have been doing their vaudeville routine for over 25 years, repeated it for a Paramount movie short—and blew their lines 19 times.

ED FLYNN: Jim Farley, who has been making a vacation trip, stopped in Mexico City long enough to witness a bullfight . . . When the ceremonies began and the first bull lunged across the arena, Farley's guide began to explain it. "Oh, I can recognize it," Farley protested. "After all, I've been around it all my life" . . . Farley, incidentally, is not interested in being a candidate for Governor. "It would cost me $50,000 a year," he reckons, "and I can't afford it."

HANS THOMSEN: The speech which the President had planned to make on Monday was a real tough one. When it is finally delivered, it will be mellowed by the personal tragedy which befell him on Sunday

RUTH HUSSEY AND MELVYN DOUGLAS have the leading roles in the Earle's new film, titled, mysteriously enough, "Our Wife." Help 'Confused' Selects Change, Clerics Urged

By Robert Tate Allan
The Post's Church Editor

America's Protestant churches must fight against the selectee's "confused mental attitude" toward national defense, and be prepared to sacrifice many ministers for chaplaincy work, Dr. S. Arthur Devan yesterday warned the General Commission on Army and Navy Chaplains. He is its director.

Members of the Commission, representing 28 Protestant denominations and 27 million constituents, heard Dr. Devan's quarterly report at a meeting in the Methodist Building on Capitol Hill. Bishop Adna Wright Leonard of the Washington area, Methodist Church, and Commission chairman, presided.

While service chaplains have been trying to stress the value of lives based on services, Dr. Devan declared that "the churches of America have not yet faced the situation." Church people do not seem to realize, said he, that democracy, religious liberty and the future of Christianity are at stake in the world conflict.

"They are confused and divided and uncertain about the defense effort and the whole world situation," he said, "and there has arisen no voice in American Protestantism to give any clear leadership. Whatever their private convictions, church leaders are apparently afraid to say anything about the moral urgency of the crisis in which we stand.

"They are afraid of being criticized as warmongers, it seems, and injuring the work of their denominations," he added.

Selectees are confused, said Dr. Devan, because compulsory service has changed their ideas about living in an unregimented peaceful land where security was supposedly the goal of all life activity.

"His life plans are interrupted, his security has disappeared, his ideology has betrayed him, he lives under discipline and regimentation which he had been trained to hate," said the director of the citizen soldier, "and now he has to spend six more months in the Army than he expected to do. Is it any wonder if he is growling?"

Director Devan emphasized, however, that the commission felt there has been no breach of promise for the Government to require further service, because of the emergency. But there is a feeling among the men of a "breach of faith," he said, and resentment at this supposed breach "is doubtless being diligently fanned by interested parties."

Later in his report, Dr. Devan pointed out that the Army wants 1000 reserve chaplains in the coming year, and that one of the commission's greatest services is to call churches' attention to the value of chaplains' work, and to urge churches to spare ministers for longer periods, when necessary. His remarks were echoed by Chaplain John J. Allan, of the Army Chaplaincy Corps, who spoke briefly.

Several distinguished churchmen attended the commission's sessions. They included Dr. Samuel M. Cavert, executive secretary of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America; Bishop W. W. Peele, of the southern Virginia area, Methodist church; Dr. Rufus W. Weaver, executive secretary of the D. C. Baptist convention and former commission chairman; Dr. William B. Pugh, of Philadelphia, Pa., stated clerk of the Presbyterian church in the United States and commission vice chairman; new Assistant Commission Director George Franklin Ketchum and others.

Va. Train Victim Dies

22% of District Selects Fail August Tests

Twenty-two per cent of the 589 men Washington local boards sent to Army induction stations in August failed Army examinations, Capital selection headquarters announced yesterday, along with a break-down by boards of the 281 men to go into uniform late this month.

While only 15 out of 227 white registrants were rejected in the Army tests at Richmond, nearly one-third of the Negro selects scheduled for swearing-in failed to win the approval of Army physicians at Baltimore.

Lieut. Col. A. C. Gray, State medical officer, who made the report, hailed the statistics as showing "our general medical rejections have reached a very satisfactory figure" but deplored the large incidence of venereal diseases among selectees. Twnty-eight men were found to have had gonorrhea while 12 had suffered from syphilis.

Other leading causes of rejection were: mental deficiency, 16; psychoneurosis, 14, and illiteracy, 12.

The 281 selectees, 153 Negro and 128 white, to be inducted September 24 and 25 will be the last contingent inducted in September. Approximately 560 recruits are to be sworn in September 15, 16, 17, and 18 at the rate of about 140 per day.

The breakdown by local boards of the 281-man requisition is as follows: Board No. 1, 9; No. 2, 2; No. 3, 14; No. 4, 8; No. 5, 3; No. 6, 9; No. 7, 11; No. 8, 13; No. 9, 13; No. 10, 13; No. 11, 16; No. 12, 20; No. 13, 7; No. 14, 14; No. 15, 14; No. 16, 8; No. 17, 10; No. 18, 11; No. 19, 15; No. 20, 6; No. 21, 20; No. 22, 4; No. 23, 12; No 24, 14, and No| 25, 15.

New Naval Unit to Widen Spread of Defense Orders

In a move to carry out Administration aims to spread defense work over a wider field, the Navy yesterday set up a new Division of Contracts Distribution, with instructions to further subcontract and subdivide naval defense contracts.

The new division, a statement issued by the department declared, will take all necessary steps to help carry out President Roosevelt's executive order of September 4 to help communities and employes whose industries are threatened with complete or partial shutdown by withdrawal of raw products needed for defense.

The orders issued by Acting Secretary James Forrestal, it was said, "specifically aim for a greater degree of subcontracting, a greater subdividing of original purchases and the assisting in the conversion of industrial plants engaged in producing normal civilian use products to render them capable of turning out articles needed vitally in national defense."

Officials admitted, however, that no concrete plans have been made to this end as yet. The work of the new division will be largely exploratory for a time, it was indicated.

Capt. C. M. Fisher, director of the shore establishments division, has been named head of the new unit. He is a veteran in the naval construction field.

The program, it was stated, will proceed along these three lines:

Examination of all current and proposed naval procurement needs "to determine the most desirable and practicable subdivision and distribution of purchases to relieve communities and industries deprived by priority ratings."

Subcontracting "as far as practicable" of work in the Navy's own industrial shore establishments.

Assisting Floyd B. Odlum, director of the OPM division of contract distribution, in getting Naval prime contractors to agree to greater subcontracting.

"It is fully realized," the Navy said, "that in some instances the proposed distribution of defense work may involve some slight delays, but the fact must be recognized that by broadening the base, the ultimate of production will be decidedly increased."

'Regulars' Win G.O.P. Contest in Philadelphia

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Sept. 10.—The Republican organization in Philadelphia overwhelmed an insurgent group in yesterday's primary on the basis of incomplete returns but across the State in Pittsburgh an independent gave regular Republican forces a setback.

In a day of listless balloting that brought out only about one-fourth of the total registration of 4,709,168, candidates supported by the Republican and Democratic State committees took commanding leads for Supreme and Superior Court nominations—the only State-wide contests.

Selection of Harmar D. Denny, jr., as the Republican nominee for mayor of Pittsburgh, was conceded before dawn by Allegheny County Republican Chairman John S. Herron.

Herron and State Republican Chairman James F. Torrance had supported Attorney George D. Wick.

Denny's success, however, was a triumph for United States Senator James J. Davis and the young Republicans.

Pittsburgh's mayor, Cornelius D. Scully, won the Democratic nomination for reelection. Returns from 31 of the city's 419 precincts gave Scully a lead of 12,300 votes over Register of Wills John M. Huston.

Scully was backed by National Democratic Committeeman David L. Lawrence.

With returns almost complete in Philadelphia, the Republican organization slate for city and county offices held a 2 or 3 to 1 lead over the insurgent ticket backed by William J. Hamilton, jr.

Hamilton, dismissed by Gov. Arthur H. James, as State secretary of revenue, had said he wanted to "revitalize" Philadelphia Republican forces.

Philadelphia Democratic candidates went through as slated.

The Republican State committee backed Justice William M. Parker for the supreme court and Judge Charles N. Kenworthy for the superior court, while the Democratic State committee supported Judge W. Russell Carr, of Uniontown, for the supreme court and Judge Michael A. Musmanno, of Pittsburgh, for the superior court.

President Names 5-Man Board In Effort to Avert Rail Strike

President Roosevelt yesterday appointed a five-man investigative board to avert a threatened Nation-wide railroad strike of 1,250,000 workers. At the same time, however, threats of serious trouble and a possible strike arose in the Southern California aircraft industry.

The fact-finding board, set up under National (Railway) Mediation Act machinery, is headed by Dean Wayne Lyman Morse, of the University of Oregon Law School. Other members are Thomas Reed Powel, famed Harvard Law School professor; James Cummings Bonbright, professor of finance at Columbia University; Joseph Henry Willits, director of social sciences for the Rockefeller Foundation, and Huston Thompson, Washington attorney and civic leader, who was formerly a member of the Federal Trade Commission.

The National Mediation Board announced that the group would meet in Chicago Monday to determine proceedings and to set a date and place for the formal investigation it must make.

Creation of the board automatically postpones for 60 days the strike called for today and Monday, occasioned by the railway workers' demands for wage increases.

Trouble in the aircraft industry was intimated by Richard Frankensteen, head of the C. I. O. United Auto Workers aviation division. He told reporters here that negotiations between the union and the Ryan Aeronautical Corporation, San Diego, and the Vultee Aircraft Co., Downey, Calif., had broken down and that he was prepared to recommend "direct action" against the two companies.

Drastic Steps Held Unnecessary

Frankensteen added, however, that after a conference with Sidney Hillman, OPM labor chief, he was assured drastic steps would not be necessary and that if there was no prospect of further direct negotiations, Hillman would seek to have the dispute certified to the National Defense Mediation Board.

Frankensteen said that this procedure would be satisfactory to him. He declared, however:

"I'm for national defense and the defense program, but I'm not going to see these people in one of the Nation's 11 basic defense industries held down to the lowest wage level of any of the 11."

The chunky union leader was sharply critical of proposed contracts between other West Coast aircraft companies and A. F. of L. unions, which provide for a 5-cents-an-hour blanket wage increase and a 7 cents additional boost following certain reclassifications. Effect of the arrangement, he insisted was to make semiskilled production employes stand the cost of higher wages to keep the skilled workers from floating off to other defense industries where wages are higher.

Frankensteen is asking a 10-cents-an-hour blanket increase and 2 cents on reclassifications.

Stabilization Is Spught

Both the C. I. O. and the A. F. of L. negotiations are part of an OPM effort designed to stabilize wages and working conditions throughout the aircraft industry.

Frankensteen said, however: "I hold that stabilization means uninterrupted flow of planes—not equalization of wage rates. I don't intend to see the A. F. of L. negotiate contracts which our people are expected to accept."

Other labor developments yesterday:

The Defense Mediation Board announced that an agreement had been reached, pending union ratification, to end the three-week-old strike of 1800 workers at the Pullman Standard Car Manufacturing Co., at Michigan City, Ind. The union involved is the A. F. of L. Railroad Carmen. Details of the agreement were not disclosed. The company manufactures railroad cars, the demand for which has become critical, owing to defense shipments.

Another board panel met yesterday with the C. I. O. United Mine Workers, headed by its president, John L. Lewis, and representatives of Alabama coal mines, where a recent strike was terminated at the board's request. The union is seeking the additional 40 cents a day granted to Southern coal miners in the Appalachian area, folowing the coal strike and subsequent agreement last spring.

STANDARD OIL COMPANY OF NEW JERSEY

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

The release of George Archie by the Nats to the St. Louis Browns at the waiver price should substantiate the skepticism toward Pacific Coast League hot shots. Archie brought a .326 batting average from the Coast to the Nats and, like Lou Novikoff who led the league in hitting last year, flopped all over the big league premises.

POVICH

Archie had certain talents, but hitting a curve ball wasn't one of them. He could muster only a .270 batting average for the Nats and within a couple of weeks after he was in the league it was noised about that most any pitcher could get him out on a No. 2 pitch.

He was supposed to be a fancy fielder at first base, also, but he couldn't field with Mickey Vernon who, up from the International League, wasn't supposed to be a fancy fielder. But Vernon was playing in a better league, despite the Pacific Coast League's classification as AA. For years now, baseball men have argued that the Coast League does not deserve its AA rating.

Chief among Archie's talents was courage. There could be no complaint against him on that score. He volunteered to play third base for the Nats when there was nobody else around for the job, and he did a tolerable job of it. There was nothing polished about his play at third, but his throwing arm was entirely competent, and he came up with balls with his teeth, if necessary. He was at his best on hard hit balls.

Archie Lacked Color

The guy didn't have any more color than a sheet of blank paper. Vocally, he was just another dead fish on a Washington club composed mostly of rigor mortis candidates. If he had any fire, it was internal. He played his baseball silently.

Buck Harris, who has been in deep pain for several years with Washington ball players who lacked dash, moaned from the beginning at Archie's negative personality. In Florida, he attempted to instill some fire in Archie with heart-to-heart talks with the fellow, but his efforts didn't register. As a last resort, Harris asked Owner Griffith to talk to the fellow.

Griffith summoned Archie to his office in Florida and asked the fellow to show a little more pep. He pointed out that some vocal accompaniment with his infield play would help the team and make his a more valuable ball player. Archie listened, but not very long.

"I don't play ball that way," he said simply, and walked out on the owner of the Nats.

Indirectly, Bobby Estalella comes to the Washington club in the deal that sent Archie to the Browns, inasmuch as the Browns own the Toledo club with which Estalella had played. And between Archie and Estalella, there could be no greater contrast in personalities. The little Cuban has color labeled all over him and has been a Griffith Stadium favorite since the day Washington fans first saw him five years ago.

Like Archie, however, Estalella has found big league pitching sort of tough to contend with. Back in the minors last season, the little Cuban led the American Association in hitting with a .380 batting average for the Milwaukee Club, but he couldn't break into the Browns' outfield this year and was released midway in the season.

Busy Ducking Dust-Off Pitch

One of the reasons, Estalella has not been a batting success in the majors is because he has been very busy ducking dust-off balls aimed at his head. There are pitchers, a great many of them, who resent the intrusion of the Cuban ball player into the American game, and are not above aiming a high hard one at his head. That fact, coupled with the better pitching Estalella has seen in the majors, has done his batting average no good.

However, Estalella has power and that is welcome on a Washington club constituted mostly of slap hitters. At times the little Cuban has given definite signs of catching up with big league pitching. In the outfield, he gets a ball pretty good. His throwing arm is not hot, but it may be good enough. Anyway, Washington fans would rather see him out there doing his Cuban best than watch a lot of the guys who are supposed to be better ball players.

The Archie-for-Estalella trade was a shrewd sort of deal by Clark Griffith from another angle. He isn't worried about Estalella's status in the draft inasmuch as Bobby is not an American citizen. Archie is under 28, unmarried and due to be classed A-1 when his number is called. Uncle Sam has no particular interest in Estalella.

Pounds Leaves San Diego

San Diego, Calif.

Dear Boss: As they say in the travelogues, "—and so, reluctantly, we say goodby to dreamy, old San Diego, where the mother speak only to their daughters and their daughters speak only to sailors." But, Boss, before I go an agate line farther with this letter, I want to tell you about that movie sign across from the hotel. There's a double feature, so help me, and the sign reads, "Men of Boys Town and Too Many Girls."

Well, Boss, as we pack up to leave for Los Angeles, I'm plenty low. Coach Ray Flaherty didn't let me play in the intra-squad game last night. He said he was saving me for the Chicago Bears, but if he don't let me get some action soon I'm going to be so moth-eaten I'm going to be a little bare.

HAIGHT

I went out to Balboa Stadium pepped up for a million last night. I was on the East squad and, now that Flaherty didn't let me get in the game, I'm darn glad the West team won. It serves that Flaherty right. He's a rather hard guy to get along with. Why he didn't even want me to give a pep talk to the team between the halves, but I did.

It was this way: We were sitting around the dressing room. Todd, Filchock, Young and Moore were sweating from the hard work and I was just sweating. Coach Flaherty yelled, "Attention, men!" and then went on, "Before I talk to you, if there is anybody who has anything to say, I want him to say it now."

I held up my hand. He looked at me rather sarcastically and said, "All right, Haight. You have the floor."

Well, Boss, I'm rather unaccustomed to public speaking, although you must admit that, when in form, I'm not so bad around Washington Post Square. And I was in form last night. I didn't mince any words. I let them have it.

I didn't start off raving like a Senator. I just eased into it. I told those football players that their kindergarten days were over. I drew them pictures of nice, thick, juicy steaks, Idaho potatoes and sliced tomatoes, and then I made a transition and painted the bread line. I asked them which they wanted.

I picked out a certain tackle who has a family and asked, "You don't want to make a liar out of your wife, do you? Every time the Good Humor man rings his bell, you don't want to make her tell the children he is Hitler?"

Then I answered the question myself, "No you don't.. You want your children to live in luxury. You want them to have so much money that they can buy an all-day sucker at 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

Well, Boss, they started to cry, these married men. The younger players didn't look any too happy either. But I didn't let them up. In fact, I gathered momentum as I went along. I began to quote the Congressional Record. Finally, I forgot I even had an audience. Boss, you would have thought it was "Haight's Farewell Address."

And then I let them have my punch line, "Now get out there on that field, fellows! I want you to let them have it. Remember, I want you to fight, fight, fight!"

Strangely, Boss, not a man moved.

I stared at them and yelled, "Are you yellow? Have you quit?"

Now listen, Boss, I don't mind fighting one or two guys, but I can't battle half the Redskins. After all, how did I know the game was over?

Always your ace,
WM. JENNINGS HAIGHT.

Cardinals Gain Two Full Games on Dodgers

St. Louis Turns Back Phils Twice

Cards Take First, 3-2; Gumbert Gives 3 Hits To Win Second, 1-0; Meet Dodgers Today

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Sept. 10.—The injury-harrassed Cardinals, counted out of the pennant race early in the week even by some of their faithful followers, leaped within one game of league-leading Brooklyn by winning a double-header from Philadelphia today, 3 to 2 and 1 to 0, while the Dodgers dropped a pair to the Cubs.

Tomorrow the Cards and the Dodgers tangle here in the first of a 3-game series which may determine the 1941 National League champion.

Harry Gumbert was the hero of the shutout even though one must not forget Johnny Mize's triple and Marty Marion's single which scored him with the only run of the game in the fourth.

Just Three Singles

Gumbert allowed only three scattered hits, all singles; he walked none, struck out five and was making the last-place Phillies hit to the infield. There were 20 assists by the infielders and the battery, two outfielders didn't get a putout and Johnny Hop, the other, had only two.

It was Gumbert's tenth victory. He has lost six.

Mize's three-bagger was the only hit good for extra bases. He walked his other trips to the plate. In the first game he walked three times and struck out once.

Lon Warneke won No. 16—equalling his mark of all last season—in the first game but he received aid from Bill Crouch in the ninth. It was his second start and first victory since his no-hitter August 30.

Nick Etten doubled to open the ninth and Dan Lithwhiler singled him home. Emmet Mueller batted for Merrill May and struck out and Pinch Hitter Chuck Klein walked. Crouch, with the Phils early this year, then forced Ben Warren to hit one of his low curves to Frank Crespi, who quickly turned it into a double play.

Bases Full Three Times

Three times in this game the Cardinals filled the bases and three times they failed to score. In the fifth it really was Ike Pearson who loaded them by walking Don Padgett, Mize and Estel Crabtree. He might have been trying too hard for the corners against these sluggers.

Then in the first inning of the nightcap St. Louis had three men on through a single and two walks and only one out, but Crabtree hit into a double play.

Catcher Owen Is Knocked for a Loop, but He Gets His Man

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Babe Dahlgren, Cub first baseman, tried hard to score on this play in eighth inning of first game of double-header with Dodgers yesterday, but Catcher Mickey Owen tagged him out and held the ball as he rolled over from the force of the collision. Dahlgren went from second to third on Dom Dallessandro's single, and then tried to score as Dallessandro attempted to stretch his hit into a double. Dom was retired at second and Billy Herman's throw home caught Dahlgren. Cubs won both games

Brooklyn's League Lead Reduced to One Game; Nicholson Gets Homer in 7th

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Sept. 10.—Playing the role of giant killers for the second time within a week, the sixth-place Chicago Cubs rammed a big dent in Brooklyn's National League pennant hopes today by sweeping a double-header from the Dodgers as the second place St. Louis Cardinals were taking two games from Philadelphia.

The Cubs, who just last Thursday knocked the Cardinals down into second place, whipped the Dodgers 5 to 4 in the opener and then took the nightcap 5 to 3. The defeats cut Brooklyn's lead over the Cardinals from three games to only one with these clubs opening their big three-game series tomorrow on the Cardinals' home grounds.

The usually docile Cubs combined unexpected power with steady hurling for the wins which slowed down the pace-making Flatbush crew. Trailing by a 3 to 0 count after seven innings, the Chicagoans scored five runs in the eighth and ninth innings to capture the first game in dramatic fashion. They rolled along to the nightcap victory behind six-hit pitching by Young Paul Erickson, aided measurably by a two-run homer in the seventh by Bill Nicholson.

Not only did the two defeats toss Brooklyn back into a dogfight battle with the Cardinals, but they also made Brooklyn's pitching suffer a rough afternoon with the big Card series coming up. In that first game, the two Dodger mound aces, Kirby Higbe and Whit Wyatt, were shelled from the hill, and two Dodger hurlers were used in the second.

Nevertheless, Manager Leo Durocher of Brooklyn stuck to his original pitching plan, stating he would lead off tomorrow with veteran Fred Fitzsimmons and follow with Curt Davis and Wyatt.

With the Dodgers leading, 3 to 0, in the opener, and apparently headed for an easy triumph, the Cubs exploded the first of their dynamite

Nats Lose To White Sox, Drop to Cellar

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

The Nats are back in the familiar surroundings of the American League cellar this morning. The rarified atmosphere of seventh place induced an attack of jitters against the White Sox yesterday and the Nats made a mess of the proceedings, taking a 12-to-4 beating.

They invited their fall into the celar with five errors crowded into the first three innings, at the end of which the White Sox had a nice sort of 10-to-0 lead, and Sid Hudson was in the showers.

Hudson was no great help to himself, what with such things as walking the first run across the plate, but he was macerated by the so-called defense of the Nats. The White Sox scored four runs in the first inning despite hitting only one ball out of the infield.

The Nats were, in fact, lucky to escape a shut-out. Thornton Lee was pitching his nineteenth victory of the year for the White Sox and was the victim of a pair of misplays in the fifth inning which led to all of the Nats' runs. He gave up nine hits while his Sox pals were assaulting Hudson, Masterson and Rookie Rollin Miller for fourteen.

A's Go Into Seventh

Washington's 18-hour stay in seventh place was thus ended, what with the A's beating the Cleveland Indians up in Philadelphia, to move out of the cellar, successfully ducking the falling bodies of the Nats.

Before Hudson could get anybody out in the ball game, the White Sox had four runs in the first inning. Rookie Dave Philley drew a walk, and Kreevich and Kuhel beat out infield hits to fill the bases quickly. Hudson walked Appling on four pitches, to force a run home. Wright moved another home with a single, a third scored while Lewis was booting Kennedy's grounder, and a fourth scored on Kreevich's infield out.

The Nats crowded three errors into the third inning, two of them by Jimmy Bloodworth, but Mickey Vernon contributed the most dam-

Pirates Purchase Two Outfielders

Pittsburgh, Sept. 10 (AP).—The Pittsburgh Pirates today announced the acquisition of two promising outfielders, Johnny Barrett, of the Hollywood Stars, and John Wyrostek, a St. Louis Cardinal farmhand who has been playing recently with New Orleans of the Southern Association.

Browns Get Archie; Nats Buy Bob Estalella

Former Seattle Star Released on Waivers; Cuban Bought Outright

George Archie's career as a member of the Nats came to an end yesterday with his release to the St. Louis Browns at the $7500 waiver price.

Simultaneously, Washington Owner Clark Griffith announced that Bobby Estalella, stumpy little Cuban outfielder, would return to the Nats from the Toledo club.

Estalella was bought from Toledo for "slightly more than $7500," said Griffith, who denied there was any connection with the Archie deal despite the fact that Toledo is owned by the Browns.

"Actually we bought Estalella several weeks ago, even before the Archie deal was considered, but we have been withholding announcement of it," said Griffith.

Archie originally came to the Nats last Winter from the Seattle Club of the Pacific Coast League, after having been voted the league's most valuable player. He brought a .326 batting average to the Nats from the Coast, but was hitting only .270 as of yesterday.

After a brief trial at first base where he lost out to Mickey Vernon in a battle for that job, Archie was transferred to third base early in the season. He was not impressive at either position and long ago the Nats placed him on the market.

Estalella was purchased by the Browns last winter after leading the American Association with a .380 batting average at Milwaukee. However, he was unable to break into the Browns' outfield in competition with Walter Judnich, Roy Cullenbine, Chet Laabs and Rip Radcliff.

Archie will join the Browns in Boston today. Estalella will not report to the Nats until next Spring.

East Places 4 in Women's Round of Eight

By the Associated Press

Brookline, Mass., Sept. 10.—Eastern standard-bearers made a determined bid to gain the women's national amateur golfing crown for the first time since 1935 when, after two rounds of match play today at the country club, they nailed down half of the eight quarter-final berths.

But the fortunes of the draw and the high caliber of the other survivors, including Mrs. Estelle Lawson Page, of Greensboro, N. C., the 1937 winner, loomed as terrific obstacles.

Three of the four Eastern victors were bunched in the upper bracket—Mrs. Reinert M. Torgerson, of Great Neck, N. Y.; Helen Sigel, of Philadelphia, and Mrs. Sylva Annenberg Leichner, the metropolitan champion—along with Texas' last remaining hopeful, Mrs. Frank Goldthwaite, of Fort Worth.

The fourth Easterner, Janet Younker, of White Plains, N. Y., who provided the tourney's major upset by eliminating Defending Champion Betty Jameson, of San Antonio, Tex., found herself paired against Mrs. Page in the other half after she conquered a pair of her own sectional rivals.

The California delegation chances dimmed alightly when its last two survivors, Mrs. Betty Hicks Newell, of Long Beach, and Clara Callender, of Pasadena, entered the same bracket after each had returned a victor twice.

Miss Callender, a semifinalist last year, also reached the last eight by overwhelming Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare, of Philadelphia, who won

D. C. Men's Pin League Launched

The Men's District League opened with a bang last night at nine alleys. With 18 teams on the maple-ways, it was the newer additions to the league that garnered most of the glory in opening matches.

El Geib, member of Map Newman's Del Ray Cavaliers, started off in midseason form with a 161 single that he turned into a 391 set, enabling the Cavaliers to take the odd tilt from Convention Hall. Teammate Bert Lynn helped Geib was a 388 set, with Lou Jenkins next high, with 357.

Charley Bauer, of the new Hi-Skor entry, almost equaled Geib with a 160 game, and went on to lead the loop with a 424 set, helping take the odd game from Anacostia Spillway. Hokie Smith, last year's high average man, had the next high set for the night, a splendid 420, which was the main reason why his Lucky Strike champions won all three from Oscar Hiser's Hyattsville boys.

Archibald Defends Feather Title Tonight Against Wright

$10,000 Gate Seen in Bout At Ball Park

Champion Underdog In 15-Round Fight; Excellent Prelims Support Main Go

By Tony Neri

With a gate of $10,000 virtually assured, Joey Archibald, the little "mayor" of Pawtucket, R. I., will defend his world's featherweight championship tonight at Griffith Stadium against Chalky Wright, of Los Angeles, in a scheduled 15-round bout.

This will be Archibald's first title defense since he won the crown for the second time over Harry Jeffra at the ball park last May. The "mayor" is undefeated in 20 consecutive bouts in Washington.

Wright has been installed the betting favorite at 7 to 5 odds. The Los Angeles Negro completed a week of training at Turner's Arena yesterday with a few light exercises and expects to enter the ring at 125 pounds. Archibald probably will come in at 124½. Official weigh-in ceremonies are listed today at the District Boxing Commission offices at 2 o'clock.

Meade in Corner

Eddie Meade, manager of former Champion Henry Armstrong, is coming down from New York to second Wright. Trainer Harry Gordon will also work in Wright's corner.

Eddie Walker, manager of Chalky, said yesterday that he isn't taking Archibald too lightly. He expects Archibald's jumping-jack tactics to worry his fighter.

Walker added: "My boy is in top shape for the fight and although Archibald's style may baffle Wright for a few rounds, I believe he can tag Joey enough to win the duke. But anything can happen and we aren't holding Joey too lightly. This is Wright's big chance and we don't want to blow it."

Archibald took the day off yesterday and went to a movie. His manager, Al Weill, announced that the champion is on edge and is raring to go. Weill reiterated his disregards to the odds which have made Archibald the underdog.

Record Intact

The veteran manager believes "Archie" will outbox Wright. Using the present tense as is his forte, Weill stated, "I lose my share of nontitle bouts but when the chips are down it is a different story. I think I can outsmart him. I never lost in 20 Washington fights. I got the winning habit and aim to keep it."

The managers of both principals are open to offers to box Richard Lemos, the National Boxing Association's champion. Weill has posted with the New York Boxing Commission a $1000 bond to show his good faith in wanting to meet Lemos. Walker plans to file a bond if Wright wins tonight. Promoter Ray Alvis has invoked the local commission, a member of the N. B. A., to secure Lemos for a title fight here which would clear up the featherweight situation.

Tonight's main event will be broadcast by Bill Stern and Sam Taub over a national hookup. Alvis plans also to interrupt the preliminaries to allow the fans to hear President Roosevelt's speech, which goes on the air at 9 p. m.

An excellent supporting card is scheduled. Jimmy Hatcher, stablemate of Archibald, will face Oscar Wright, local Negro lightweight, in an eight-rounder; Billy Banks, the U Street Beau Brummel, will meet Carroll "Kid" Alexander, Bob Hayden's featherweight, in another eight; Art Lind, protege of Ken Overlin, is paired against Buddy Thomas, local middleweight, in a six-rounder, and Milo Theodorescu, stablemate of Wright, faces Cowboy Coates, of Norfolk, in another six-rounder.

The program will begin at 8:30 p. m.

Conrad Back at End For U. of Maryland

By the Associated Press

Luther Conrad, Maryland gridder who won his letter at end last fall, was back at his old position today after a brief fling at tackle.

Coach Jack Faber said Conrad was shaping up well at tackle, but the shift was necessary because George Simler, 6-foot-2 sophomore end, has failed to report.

Hillendale Golf Team Here Sunday

Indian Spring's Maryland State team championship favorites will play host to Hillendale Sunday in the only quarter-final match to be played over a Washington course.

Kenwood will visit Bonnie View and Beaver Dam will trek to the Country Club of Maryland. In an all-Baltimore match, Rolling Road will play at Baltimore C. C.

All matches will start at 1:30 p. m.

Owen, Miller on NBA Board; Convention Flays Monopoly

Special Dispatch to The Post

Winston-Salem, N. C., Sept. 10.—Claude W. Owen, chairman of the District Boxing Commission, today was elected to the board of governors of the N. B. A. assembled here in their twenty-second annual convention.

Lieut. Col. Harvey L. Miller, United States Marine Corps, was reappointed executive secretary. The convention unanimously voted that hereafter all ratings and national news releases would emanate from the Nation's Capital.

Patterson (N. J.) newspaper sports editor Abe J. Greene, chairman of the New Jersey commission was unanimously elected president.

Other officers elected are: First Vice President Fleming B. Adae, Florida; second vice president, Johnson S. Mattingly, Kentucky; third vice present, Senator Ed W. Bohn, Colorado; fourth vice president, Jerry Geisler, California. Treasurer, Harry J. Landry, Mississippi.

The convention just concluded was easily the most ambitious, aggressive and best attended in N. B. A. history, the fight against monopoly being the battle cry.

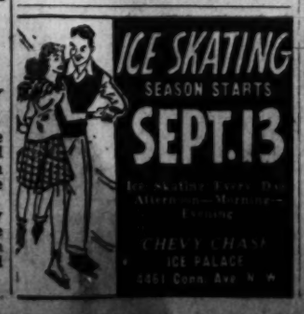
During the past year various N. B. A. officials have been obtaining competent legal advice to the effect that the one-man hold on boxers can be released by the simple expedient of bringing suit in a specific case, since house control of fighters, directly or indirectly, is contrary to the laws of the State of New York.

Royals Defeat Bisons in Series

Montreal, Sept. 10 (AP).—The Montreal Royals boosted themselves back on even terms with the Buffalo Bisons in their Governors' Cup playoffs tonight, marking up a 7-0 victory in the second game of the best-of-seven semifinal round.

Given a two-hit pitching performance by Ed Head, who chalked up 18 victories during the regular International League campaign, the Royals banged away for eight blows and routed Hal White in the seventh.

Six of the Montreal runs were unearned, however, as the Bisons chipped in with four costly errors, two by Mickey Rocco.



Packers Release Arnold Herber, Great Passer

By the Associated Press

Green Bay, Wis., Sept. 10.—Arnold Herber, for many years one of the greatest forward passers in professional football, is being released by the Green Bay Packers football club.

Coach E. L. (Curley) Lambeau revealed today that he had asked waivers on Herber and five other members of the team, Champ Seibold, veteran tackle; Dick Evans, Iowa end; Lou Midler, Minnesota Guard; Henry Luebcke, Iowa tackle and Bob Kahler, Nebraska halfback.

Seibold was starting his seventh year with the Packers; Midler and Evans were second-year men and Kahler and Luebcke recruits.

Herber joined the Packer squad in 1931. His passing helped win a championship that year. It was Herber's passes to Don Huston, an end, that helped win championships in 1936 and 1939.

Eddie Arcaro Suspended Until 1942

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 10.—Eddie Arcaro's hopes of riding the great Whirlaway again this year were squashed today when he was suspended for the remainder of 1941 by the stewards of the Jockey Club for foul riding in the rich Hopeful Stakes at Saratoga Springs, August 30.

The 26-year-old Newport (Ky.) Italian jockey, given much of the credit for Whirlaway's victories in the Kentucky Derby, Preakness and Belmont Stakes, was held responsible for bothering Walter Chrysler, jr., Ramillies with his employer's colt, Mrs. Payne Whitney's Shut Out, during the run down the backstretch of the 2-year-old classic.

Devil Diver, also owned by Mrs. Whitney, won the race with Shut Out second. Another stablemate, Mrs. Charles Shipman Payson's Amphitheatre, was third. There was no disqualification, but the Saratoga stewards suspended Arcaro and referred his case to the stewards of the Jockey Club. Ramillies came out of the Hopeful with a filled leg and some cuts and only recently was brought back to training.

EDDIE ARCARO

The stewards held their meeting today, between races at Aqueduct and handed down their brief announcement after hearing the testimony of patrol judges and Jockey Johnny Longden, who rode Ramillies. Longden flew here from California to testify and planned to fly back tonight.

Suspensions are nothing new for Arcaro. On August 21, only nine days before the Hopeful, he finished a 30-day ban for rough riding at Empire City July 19. Back in 1936 he also drew a long suspension after his mount in the Pimlico Futurity, Privileged, was disqualified.

Since July 19, the job of handling Whirlaway has been divided between Wendell Eads, Warren Wright's contract rider, and Alfred Robertson. "Robbie" is slated to pilot the colt in the $25,000 Narragansett special Saturday.

Following the special, Whirlaway has engagements in such important stakes as the $30,000 New York Handicap, Lawrence Realization and Jockey Club Gold Cup at Belmont Park and the coveted Pimlico Special in November.

HUNT

Hunt who schooled here at Eastern and then at George Washington where he won fame both as a tennis player and a mathematical wizard, lived at 452 New Jersey Avenue Southeast.

Hunt was a registrant at Local Board 15.

Possessed of all the strokes necessary to make a tennis champion, this slim youngster always was a disappointment to his rooters. Although one year he upset Bobby Riggs, now national champion, in the National Singles, he never ranked better than ninth among the country's amateurs.

Buddy Sharkey Wins D. C. Amateur Golf Medal With a 71

Olmsted and Wenzel Second With 74s; Bogart Posts a 75; Burnett Picks Up

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Kenwood continued to bluff the District's best amateur golfers until late yesterday afternoon when Buddy Sharkey came in with the only par round of the annual city championship play to win medal honors by three shots.

As the big shots in the second day's field, like the first, continued to flounder around the middle and high 70s, the 21-year old Georgetown University senior posted a round which included a dozen pars, three birdies and three bogeys to easily cop qualifying honors.

Until Sharkey finished the first day, 74s of Jock Olmsted and Bill Wenzel were still good. Ralph Bogart, the 1939 and '40 champion, was fortunate to get away with a 75 as he was in trouble several times while the only other sub-78 score of the day was a 75 by Martin McCarthy, the Columbia Club champion.

Roger Pescock, who shot himself out of the championship flight on Tuesday with a 78, had company yesterday in Maryland State Champion Volney Burnett, who, like Peacock, drove all night before his medal test and found the grind too much. Burnett was out in 44 and after missing a birdie putt on the twelfth called it a day. Dick Melvin was another disappointment, for after eight straight pars and an out nine of 36 he was back with eight straight bogeys and a 43 for 79.

Two Squeeze In

Scores of 77 and better made the championship flight without a play-off, Charles L. Vaile, of the host club, and George F. Miller, Columbia, squeezing in at that figure.

Others who made the first 16 yesterday included C. E. Nebeker, Manor, who posted a 76, including an eagle 3 on the twelfth hole; Earl Skinker, Columbia, who paired 38s for a 76, and Gene Pittman, the straight shooter from Congressional, who was in the running for the medal for ten holes, but when he started missing par on the back nine he just got in with a 76 by holing a 6-foot pressure putt on the eighteenth.

The championship flight, although weakened by the failure of Peacock and Burnett to qualify, is nevertheless one of the best in years. There are a number of good matches this morning in the first round including Martin McCarthy vs. M. Parker Nolan, Jock Olmsted vs. George Vass, Wenzel against Skinker, Southpaw Earl McAleer vs. George Miller and Bogart against Eddie Ault, who is in a perfect spot to pull an upset.

Birdies on Third, Fifth

Sharkey, next to last player to finish, was the potential medalist as he passed the ninth hole one under par, dropping easy birdies on the third and fifth holes and missing par on the sixth. He knocked in a six-footer for a birdie deuce on the tenth to go two under par but went over on 11. It looked as though the back nine jinx which had followed the field had caught Sharkey as he played the thirteenth hole like a rank duffer and finally one-putted for a six. The two-time Indian Spring Club titlist pulled himself together at that point, however, and rammed home five straight pars for his 71 to save the face of the entire field.

The starting field over the two day's medal play was 89, one of the biggest in years.

A's Halt Rally By Indians, Win, 6 to 4

By International News Service

Philadelphia, Sept. 10.—The Athletics picked up runs all along the route today and staved off a late rush by the Cleveland Indians to beat the visitors by 6 to 4.

Rookie Fred Caliguiri hurled a two-hit shutout for six innings in behalf of the A's, then served a home-run ball to Ken Keltner in the seventh, and loose infielding helped the Indians to three more runs in the ninth.

Braves' 3 Runs in 15th Whip Reds, 4-1

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, Sept. 10.—The Cincinnati Reds and the Boston Braves put on one of their marathon games today and it was the Braves who panted in to victory in the fifteenth inning, 4-to-1.

Paul Derringer, beginning to show his 1940 form after an operation to correct a training camp injury, and Jim Tobin fought for 12 of the innings with a run on each side, but Joe Beggs, premier fireman of last year for the Reds, couldn't hold the hose in the fifteenth.

Ray Berres opened with a single and took second on Mike McCormick's bad throw to the infield. He was sacrificed to third and Frank Lamanna ran for him and scored on Roberge's single. Gene Moore doubled to chase in Roberge, and Buddy Hassett doubled for the final run.

Derringer allowed only nine hits in the 13 innings he worked.

Bosox Rout Tigers, 11-2, Split Even With Foe in Year's Series

By the Associated Press

Boston, Sept. 10.—The Boston Red Sox closed their 1941 series with Detroit today by taking the Tigers, 11 to 2, thus splitting even in the season's 22 games.

The Sox scored enough runs in the four-run first off Bobo Newsom to settle the issue.

After Dom Dimaggio and Lou Finney walked Joe Cronin singled, scoring Dimaggio. Then Ted Williams walked and Finney scored on Jim Tabor's fly to McCocky. Cronin and Williams came in on Bobby Doerr's double after Jimmy Foxx singled.

Paul Trout took over the Tigers' pitching assignment, going through the seventh inning, when Doerr rattled his sixteenth homer of the season off the left-field screen.

Crippled 'Skins Face Battle in All-Stars

By Walter Haight

Post Staff Writer

Los Angeles, Calif., Sept. 10.—Considered little more than a practice game that they could take in stride a week ago, the Redskins' clash Friday night with the Pacific Coast All-Stars now looms as a battle royal. Whatever edge the Washington pros had through teamplay and experience now seems to be offset by the fact the Redskins have met up with a string of injuries.

At least seven players, counted on strongly by Coach Ray Flaherty either will not see action or will be handicapped. Four of the five guards, considered regulars, are ailing. Clyde Shugart is definitely out with a pulled muscle in his back, Clem Stralka was kicked on his knee in scrimmage yesterday and is a doubtful starter. Steve Slivinski, with the aid of some good taping by Trainer Dock Mauro, may get in the line. Dick Farman has a shoulder injury expected to keep him on the sidelines.

Flaherty has only Vic Carroll, the veteran, and Truck Tornell, a rookie, shipshape for guard positions. He will have to draw on tackles to fill in. At least two backs are not sound. Andy Farkas has progressed well during the week, but his knee is still a question mark. Dick Todd has an injured instep, while Frank Clair and Ed Cifers, excellent rookie ends, have pulled leg muscles.

Redskins took only a light workout this morning, following yesterday's scrimmage. Kicking, passing and dummy scrimmage took up most of the two hours.

The first cut in the Redskin squad came today when Center Morris Buckingham, from San Jose, was released. He was no match for Bob Tichneal, Ki Aldrich, Steve Anadrako and George Smith, and Coach Flaherty did not want to waste any more of Buckingham's time.

The Pacific Coast All-Stars number a long list of "big name" players, including three colored stars from last year's U. C. L. A. team. This group is headed by Kenny Washington, fast-running and accurate-passing back. Jack Robinson, another back and Woodrow Wilson Strode, an end, also are Unclan aces ready for action. In addition to Robinson and Strode, the Coast eleven will have Garrett Arbelbide, one-time All-American end at Southern California, and Lefty Goodhue, from Whittier College, as targets for the passes of Kenny Washington.

Paul Schissler, former coach of Chicago Cardinals, and Ernie Pinckert, former Redskin ace, are coaching the stars. The game is reported to be a sell-out, and will be staged at Gilmore Stadium which has a capacity of 18,000.

Dulie Captures Brookland Wood Farm Purse at Timonium

Butcher Boy Is Second; Dufford Hero

Dashing Doe Runs Third; 7000 Fans See Turf Program; Winner Pays $16.20

By Clocker Mike

Timonium, Md., Sept. 10.—The luck of Charlie Feltner was carried another step today when he saddled Dulie, a 6-year-old son of Dunlin, for his engagement in the Brookland Wood Farm Purse, fifth and feature event at this turf point. The veteran was in rare form today and he scored by a half length over Butcher Boy, half of the McNey entry. Dashing Doe, after holding a long early lead, managed to hold on for the short award.

Feltner had to share the honors with Jockey Willie Dufford, the leading booter at the meeting. Dufford had his mount off in the first flight and took a good grip on him when it was evident that he could not run with Dashing Doe. To the 7000 fans in the stand, it appeared that Dashing Doe had the race to herself but the track regulars knew her bad habit of quitting and were just looking to see who was going to catch her first. Entering the backstretch it looked as though Butcher Boy was going right around the leaders to take command but Dufford had not filed his application as yet.

Begins to Back Up

Entering the final turn, it looked like today might be the day for Dashing Doe to forget to stop, but just inside the final sixteenth she acted as though she had hit a brick wall and began to back up. Dulie moved to the fore and Butcher Boy was forced to circle both leaders. He closed so well that it appeared he would have gotten up in another few yards.

Dulie, making his first start since Bel Air meeting, raced the 6½ furlongs over a fast track in 1:21 4-5 while scoring his third win of the year. He has been brought along slowly this year and was making only his seventh start of the season. This marked the first time he had reached the winner's circle since the Oaklawn Park session in March. His straight pay-off today was $16.20.

ROUGE CATALAN moved to the front after a mile while fencing well, held away thereafter and was all out to win. LE PASSADOU was outrun for a mile, moved up gradually and would have won in another stride. ANCHORS DOWN was up and back throughout the race. NURSERY PRANKS was running well in front when he landed badly at the eleventh and again at the thirteenth fence. RUNNING FOOL jumped and raced well for a mile and then faltered.

PUSHKIN was coasting in behind the pace for a half, went to the outside of the leaders and was going away at the end. DEODO was within striking distance from the start, got up for place, but was dead tired at the end. CUT EMERALD was unable to outrun FLICK, took a commanding lead when the latter quit, but was not good enough to last. OSOFREE was far out of it early and came well while racing on the extreme outside. FLICK set the pace for a half but quit when unable to get away from CUT EMERALD.

DULIE coasted along behind to the stretch, responded to pressure and was hard ridden to hold BUTCHER BOY safe. The latter began moving entering the backstretch, hung slightly down the backstretch, but came again in the last quarter while being hard ridden. DASHING DOE took command at once, held on better than usual, but was not good enough. PETIT FOURS saved ground while moving and closed well. UNKNOWN LAND tired gradually.

ZAC PAM tried to duck out at the start, went wide at the first turn, held command thereafter while being rated and was going away again at the end. REAL BOY moved up gradually, but could make up no ground on the winner through the last sixteenth. SUN SCENE chased the winner throughout and weakened in the stretch. Selections at Timonium

Dear Al:

The Timonium stewards yesterday suspended Jockey Glen Smith for the remainder of the meeting, and referred his case to the racing commission, for appearing on the grounds in an unfit condition on September 8. Smith, who is from Weyser, Idaho, has been riding since 1931 and just Tuesday he announced that he would give up the saddle and turn to the training end. He now reports that, if the commission allows, he will handle the riding engagements for Jockey Mike Basile during the Harve de Grace session. Basile is expected to do most of the riding for the G. R. Watkins stable. These horses are trained by "Whitey" Nixon. It now appears certain that Big Pebble will be a starter in the $15,000 Added Harve de Grace Handicap. Jockey Jack Wastrope announced in New York that his only appearance at the Graw would be in Saturday's stake. While we were announcing the names of those going to Wheeling, we forgot to say that Leon Garrett will leave Thursday directly after the races. Maj. Goss L. Stryker, president of the Laurel track, has announced that the Queen Isabella, $5000 added at a mile and a furlong, would be run for the first time on October 13 and would be renewed annually on Columbus Day. This stake is one of those being inaugurated this year for fillies and mares. It was learned that Frank Christmas, of Upper Marlboro Christmases, has been discharged from Mary Immaculate Hospital, Jamaica, Long Island. Christmas had been confined there with an injured arm received when knocked over by a horse he was training. I was hoping that Peppery would be in today but it was no soap. That was still a pretty good record she made. Three wins in the first six days of the meeting. Of course it would have been had she been able to take five during the ten-day session. Well the riders and trainers race wound up just the way it started. Willie Dufford easily took the riders laurels and John Bosley, his employer, walked off with the honors in the trainers division. The meeting closes with the feature race being at a mile and a sixteenth. This race has attracted Mightily, Tyr Shaileen, Rough Going and seven other routers. The final race of the day is named the "Hagner." This race is run in honor of Dick Hagner, bookkeeper for the Timonium Fair Association.

First race—FAIR ROCK scored at first asking here and seems capable of repeating here. QUICK VINE was poorly handled last out and will likely run a better race today. BLUE COVERT is always dangerout, when started with this kind.

Second race—DOCTOR'S NURSE is stepping up in society with these but her last race was good enough to warrant a selection with this sort. HIGH BUD is as consistent as they come and figures to be no worse than second. FLAG ETTA ran a fair race with good ones last out after running to the outside fence at the first turn.

Third race—OLYMPIAN has been coming from behind in those shorter races and I think he is capable of taking this field into camp. FAIR FLAME is somewhat of a champ around here and is the likely choice. CHIEF TEDDY is another that should like the added distance. SUEGALE could be a factor if started.

Fourth race—BLOCKADE has been running with the best here and is dropping down enough to take the whole pot. TAR MISS ran a much-improved race last out and will be a contender. MISS MUD is dangerous but is not a likely starter.

Fifth race—TYR is stepping up the ladder a little but that last race was so good that I am forced to give him the call here. He was beaten in that affair but had trouble throughout. SHAILLEEN is finally getting a distance that suits. MIGHTILY is another that raced an unsuitable distance last out.

Sixth race—WINTONA stumbled coming out of the gate last out but the race before that was a corker. Might take the front end and lead throughout. OUR TEDDY was right behind the top one in that good race and figures to give chief contention. CUSTER was in need of that last race and should improve.

Seventh race—ACE OF TRUMPS has apparently worked up to a winning race and this appears to be the right spot. OVERCALL will be picking up horses in the last eighth. TROSTAR is better than those recent races would suggest.

Eighth race—RIVER BROOM was a good winner last out and should have little trouble taking care of this field. SETTLER closed well behind Scootie and will be dangerous. IDLE NIGHT may improve enough to take a share.

CLOCKER MIKE'S SELECTIONS

1—Quick Vine, True Warrior, Fair Rock.
2—High Bud, Flag Etta, Fitmiss.
3—Fiar Flame, Chief Teddy, Myrtle M.
4—Blockader, Tar Miss, Dominal.
5—Tyr, Shaileen, Rough Going, Gimpsy.
6—Custer, Yankee Lad, Joe D.
7—Almaz, Ace of Trumps, Artist.
8—River Broom, William V., Blenethel.
Best bet—Mightily.

3 Former G. W. Athletes to Get Sports Jobs

A trio of former George Washington athletes yesterday were recommended for physical education positions at local schools. Hardy Pearce, acting head of the department of health and physical education of the public schools, sent to the Board of Education for approval the names of George Garber, "Reds" Auerbach and Ralph Zelaska. Pearce's recommendations usually are tantamount to definite appointments.

Garber is to go to Wilson, Auerbach to Roosevelt to supplant Herman Littman, director of athletics who has been called up as a reserve officer by the Army, and Zelaski to Hine Junior High to supplant Stewart McCall as director of athletics.

Garber was a two-sport star at George Washington, earning all-District recognition as a basketball forward, and much praise as an infielder in baseball. Auerbach also was a crack basketball player, while Zelaska played football.

Topnotch Race Stars Meet At Lanham

Racing Director S. F. "Red" Crise and Jack Kochman, of the Speedway Enterprises, have joined with Racing Manager Tom Lane, of the West Lanham, Md., Speedway, in lining up some of the fastest cars and best drivers in the United States for tomorrow night's opening 1941 seven-event program to be sponsored by the American Automobile Association at the Lanham raceway at 8:30 o'clock.

Crise flew to Washington yesterday to confer with Lane and attend a luncheon tendered sports writers and sportscasters by Squire Edward Mahoney, and when they emerged from their huddle they announced that Tony Willman, the Middle Western little and big car racing star, and Red Redmond, the former Georgia Tech athlete and daredevil driver, have been added to the good-sized field.

They also announced that the first ten leading point scorers of the Eastern division of the American Automobile Association will compete tomorrow night, namely: George Fonder, Charley Miller, John Peterson, Joe Garson, Johnny Ritter, Charley Breslin, John Pierson, Dee Toran, Dave Randolph and John Jarr in that order.

Willman and Redmond were outstanding favorites at the old Capital Speedway two years ago and have gone far since. William recently won the rich Milwaukee Sweepstakes and is numbered among the leading pointmakers of the Western division of the Three A's.

Dahlgren walked, but Dom Dallessandro slashed a single to right, scoring Nicholson. A great throw by Dixie Walker, however, got Dallessandro as he tried for second on the play, and Bill Herman, firing the ball from one knee after making the putout at second, got Dahlgren at the plate, McCullough fanned to end the inning.

Fraley Risks Mat Streak to Cox Tonight

Joe Cox, the Kansas Krasher, who is known in the wrestling ring as "The Spoiler," will attempt to spoil the seven-match winning streak of Pat Fraley, champion of the Pacific Coast, Australia and New Zealand, in tonight's feature bout at Turner's Arena.

Cox also will be seeking revenge for a previous defeat hung on him by Fraley, about five weeks ago, and the Kansan has promised retaliation in "blitzkrieg" fashion.

Fraley, 225-pounder who features such holds as the "Australian leglock" and the "Australian boomerang," recently disposed of the Green Hornet, who last week lifted his hood and revealed himself as the former football star, big Jim Henry.

Cox is around squawking his head off about the last match with Fraley in which the Kansan says he was given a "runaround" by Referee Casey Berger. To top it all, reports Cox, Berger gave him a quick count.

In a special added attraction, Jim Henry will square off with Milo Steinborn, the Memphis "Strong Man." Henry has on file at the Arena a challenge to face the winner of the Fraley-Cox scrap, Promoter Turner announced.

In other bouts Rowdy Rudy Dusek will meet Fred Grobmier, Frank Judson will take on Eddie Newman and Maurice LaChappelle will tangle with Jim Austeri.

First match is at 8:30.

Promoter Turner announced that the President's speech will be broadcast over the Arena loudspeaker.

Pirates Beat Giants, 10-7, In Wild Game

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Sept. 10.—The Pittsburgh Pirates and New York Giants turned a good ball game into a burlesque in the closing innings today, but by whatever name it was known the Pirates won, 10 to 7.

The Giants got one run and the Pirates two in the first inning. Then followed five scoreless frames of airtight baseball, with Max Butcher battling Harry Feldman, a rookie pitcher just up from Jersey City.

However, in the seventh and eighth innings the two teams between them made 18 hits and 14 runs and brought in a parade of pitchers. The Buccaneers had a little the best of the slugging and John Lanning received credit for the victory with Bill Lohrman getting charged with the defeat.

It was the last meeting of the year for the teams and gave Pittsburgh the season's series, 14 to 8. They also played two ties.

WHO'S THE BOSS IF JOE LOUIS IS DRAFTED?

New York, Sept. 10.—What's going to happen in the heavyweight division when Joe Louis goes into the Army? Well, a good chunk of that answer will be revealed on the night of September 29. If Lou Nova beats Joe that night, and we think that's more than possible, the title won't be put in cold storage for a year. But if Joe wins, and goes in khaki immediately thereafter, you can expect an elimination tournament, a flock of spurious title claims, and the general chaos that comes to the division when there is no standout fighter.

CONSIDINE

If Louis wins, Nova's outlook during Joe's sabbatical year will depend on the kind of fight Lou puts up. If he gets biffed out in a hurry, which we think will be the way he'll go, if he goes, the guy who'll clean up during Joe's absence will be Billy Conn. The public will accept him as the champ pro tem, because it will remember that Billy was within a punch or two of winning the title from Louis last June.

If Nova puts up a real battle, but loses, a Conn-Nova match for next June will be the natural result. But this presumes that each will survive the inevitable elimination tournament Promoter Mike Jacobs will stage, and neither is far enough ahead of the heavyweight pack to be held as a sure pop bet to beat Buddy Baer, Abe Simon or even Bob Pastor, if Pastor is in shape.

We've always had a hunch, too, that Max Baer, in his perverse way, would give Conn an awful evening—which may or may not be a tipoff on the state of the heavyweight division, sans Louis. Off-handed, we wouldn't class a Nova-Conn fight as among the most decisive battles in history.

Joe May Welcome Draft

We've also been wondering what effect Joe's impending induction (and it does seem pretty certain that he'll go in, even if his Chicago draft does hold out to him an offer to appeal his reclassification) will have on him. Louis' mind isn't as easily classificable as his draft status.

We think he has secretly wanted to retire, or relax, almost since the night he beat Max Schmeling. He has been held in back by managers, his commitments and his humble feeling that he owes something to the men who made him, notably Jacobs.

Now, though his boss is destined to be Uncle Sam, instead of Uncle Mike, and though he'll be paid somewhat less than when he works for Uncle Mike, Louis is in a sense liberated from a curious bondage that made him wealthy, yet kept him fighting after he had everything he wanted in life.

There is not telling how that will color his approach to the Nova fight. It might make him careless, or at least less eager to win, knowing as he will that he'll still be worth only $21 a month whether he goes into the Army as a champion or as a former champion. And knowing, too, that if he comes out of the Army as a former champ, more matches and thus more dough will await him, if he wants to fight.

On the other hand, the fellow has a pride in his title, and he may want to go, out for a year in a blaze of glory—belting out the last reputable challenger on the horizon. We saw an almost grisly sample of that pride the night in Washington when Buddy Baer clouted him out of the ring. The punch made Joe look bad in front of a predominantly colored audience he wanted to impress. The Louis that Buddy had to fight after that knockdown must have been one of the most savage men in ring history. His injured pride even led him to punch Buddy after the bell, which was just about Joe's first departure from Hoyle.

Anyway, we'll see. And whatever happs, the division will be drab without him, and will have to operate on starvation rations until he returns, presuming again that he'll want to come back to his gaudy slavery.

aging misplay. With runners on second and third and two out, Vernon made an incredible muff of a feeble grounder off Kreevich's bat, and both runs scored.

In the third inning, the Nats made only one error, but it was something to behold. Johnny Welaj fielded a double off Philley's bat, started to throw it and then dropped the ball as Philley took an extra base. Eventually, Taft Wright tripled home the third run of the inning.

An error by Kolloway put Welaj on base in the fifth inning and Bloodworth later walked. A run scored when Evans' fly was lost in the sun by Philley. Another scored when Masterson strangely made a squeeze bunt with his club ten runs behind. Two more scored when Rookie Philley played George Case's triple as if he were trying to find something else.

Roberto Ortiz figured as pinch-hitter yesterday after being benched when he reported the fourth finger on his left hand was sprained following his crash into the left field wall Tuesday night. . . . Jake Early, out of the line-up with facial palsy, reported he is now able to close his left eye, but he may not rejoin the line-up for a week. . . . The Indians moved into the stadium for a double-header today.

Mrs. Newell, the California champion, was even more impressive while drubbing Mrs. H. Warren Beard, of Newton, Mass., 4 and 3, after the latter fired a three-under-par 34 and suffered the nerve-shattering experience of finding herself all-even at the turn.

The most heroic third-round winners were Miss Sigel and Mrs. Leichner. After losing five of the first seven holes, the former fought back valiantly to gain a 21-hole victory over Dorothy Germain, of Manoa, Pa., and Mrs. Leichner had to go two extra holes to shake off the capable Marion Miley, of Lexington, Ky.

Miss Younker's second victory of the day was a 7 and 6 romp against the seasoned Maureen Orcutt, of Haworth, N. J., and Mrs. Page kept pace by defeating Eleanor Dudley, of Chicago, 2 and 1.

In the afternoon's South East matches, Mrs. Goldwaite defeated Gail Wild, of Springfield, N. J., 3 and 2, and Mrs. Torgerson bested Kathryn Hemphill, of Columbia, S. C., 2 and 1.

Among the outstanding second-round casualties were Louise Suggs, the Southern titlist; Mrs. James Ferrie, of Long Beach, Calif., another 1940 semifinalist; Mrs. Russell C. Mann, the trans-Mississippi and Western champion, and the only foreign threat in the starting field of 116, Toronto's Grace Sears.

Bill Reinhart Cites Back's Long Layoff

Buff Coach Doesn't Expect Much From Former Frosh Star Until Late Season

By Jack Munhall

Reminding one and all with a wagging of his chubby fore-finger that a season and a half of inactivity is bound to rust any athlete, G. W. Coach Bill Reinhart yesterday warned Colonial fans and the press not to expect too much this season from Sophomore Back Don Pinnow.

Pinnow, a 185-pound blond terror when he was gamboling in the Buff and Blue freshman backfield two years ago before he dropped out of school, has been heralded as the triple-threat needed to spark the current team.

But Reinhart, cagy after years of experience with not only football players but also basketball and baseball performers, is not yet one of the "Pinnow for President" club.

"Sure, he was a helluva freshman back two years ago, but if he's as proportionately good today as the kids who started out with him and have played steadily ever since, then there's no use for me and the other football coaches.

"That's where people make a mistake when they shrug off the drafting of an athlete by saying his time in the Army will do him a lot of good. Yeah, the Army life undoubtedly will do any kid a lot of good, but not in athletics.

The Old Verve Goes

"A year or two away from the sport they play and those fellows are just about through as competitors. They lose their snap, their legs tighten up on them and unless they're young they usually never come back. Take Cliff Bolton, the Nats' catcher who was such a terrific hitter before he went A. W. O. L. once too often. When he rejoined the club this season after a long period of inactivity, he had lost his batting eye and apparently couldn't find it. What was wrong? Simply that Bolton's reflexes had been dulled by lack of practice. He could still sock a slow ball, but when the pitchers started whizzing 'em over the plate, Bolton was finished. He couldn't get his bat around in time.

"Now I'm not saying that Pinnow can't still heave that football, or crack a line or give opposing backs plenty of grief from his defensive position, but I do say that it will be most surprising if he can pick up right away where he left off back in 1939. He's missed two spring and one fall practices whereas Scott Gudmundson and some of these other boys who entered school the same time as Pinnow have had the benefit of all that experience. Naturally, they are more advanced. If they weren't, then, as I said before, what good is a coach?"

Pinnow Must Hustle

Reinhart's observations on Pinnow seemed to reflect the opinion of several other observers who have followed closely the Colonials' few fall practices to date. Summing it up, one said: "Pinnow'll have to hustle plenty to do the team much good."

Reinhart, holding practice late in the afternoon yesterday to escape the midday heat, talked confidently of the coming football season.

"We ought to have a good team," he said. "But nowadays you can't tell from one week to another what players will be gone. This draft has us all on pins and needles.

Specifically, Reinhart is frightened by the thought that three of his best players—Johnny Picco, Mike Monchlovich and Babe Nugent—are in imminent danger of Mr. Whiskers, and half a dozen others also are highly eligible.

HOT OFF THE G. W. GRID-DLE—One reason behind Coach Reinhart's optomism over current prospects is the unexpected heft of the squad . . . Several kids who weighed dangerously light, at around 165 and 170 last year, are now full-fledged lightheavyweights at 185 or 190 . . . in this class are Federa, Stan Zlorbro, the guard converted to end, Jim Graham, halfback up from the frosh, and Don Seibert, the unusually promising junior center . . . Ray Hanken, the former great Colonial end who later starred with the N. Y. Giants, seems to have the makings of a fine coach . . . Judging from practice, he has the respect of his linemen pupils and his instructions are given clearly and unhesitatingly. Matt Zunic, the basketball ace who is trying for the team in his senior year for the first time, did the same thing in high school, at New Kensington, near Pittsburgh . . . Played only basketball until his last year and then went out and made the school eleven before being sidelined with injuries . . . Coach Reinhart hopes history will repeat and that Zunic will prove good enough to make G. W.'s team.

Aerial Freighters To Carry Defense Supplies to North

Sacramento, Calif., Sept. 10 (AP).—Big aerial freighters soon will be racing vital defense supplies to America's outposts in Alaska, on a regular schedule on a 2000-mile route.

That was the Army's answer today to the necessity of whipping up defense preparations at the isolated far north bases.

Air corps pilots of the Fiftieth transport wing will fly the freight, using twin-engine transport planes. The route will be between the Sacramento air depot and Ladd Field, Fairbanks, Alaska. Service will start as soon as equipment arrives.

Instead of requiring long weeks to get materials and equipment to Alaskan destinations by water routes, Ladd Field now will be only three days away—even closer in event of emergency.

Merger is proposed with Auto-Ordnance Corporation, at present a Thompson subsidiary, which would assume all the assets and liabilities of Thompson, the latter to dissolve.

Upon consummation of the proposed merger, stockholders of Thompson would receive four shares of newly authorized $1 par stock of Auto-Ordnance capital stock for each share of Thompson.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Sept. 10 (AP).—Prices of grains and soybeans slumped 2 to more than 5 cents a bushel today in a wave of profit-taking and general selling touched off by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau's suggestions of methods for combating inflation.

However, after absorbing heavy selling outbursts, particularly at the opening and later in the final hour, the market displayed strong recovery power. This was particularly noticeable in the soybean pit, where, despite price gains of 16 cents the first two days of the week, the maximum permitted by trading rules, selling was quickly absorbed and much of extreme losses of 3½ to 5⅝ cents regained.

Wheat and rye fell more than 3 cents and corn and oats more than 2 cents. Covering of previous short sales, resting orders to buy and some purchases attributed to consuming and processing interests who have been waiting for a price reaction helped to rally the market at times. Mills were reported active in wheat.

A late rally enabled wheat to close only 2 to 2¾ lower than yesterday. September 1.18¼, December 1.22⅛@1.22. Corn was 1⅛ to 1½ down, September 79½. December 84¼; oats, 1¼ to 1⅜ off; soybeans, 1¾ to 4⅛ lower; rye, 1¾ to 2¼ down, and lard, 15 to 30 lower.

Stock Prices Wilt on Morgenthau Warning Of Heavier Taxes, Stronger Credit Controls

New York, Sept. 10.—The bull market in commodities today was halted by heavy selling and stocks, after feeble recovery efforts at the start, resumed the retreat that has marked most sessions since the beginning of September.

Prompting the wave of liquidation here was the proposal of Secretary Morgenthau that stored surpluses of farm products be released to check artificially rising prices. On Tuesday prices of commodities had a soaring advance on Agricultural Secretary Wickard's appeal for a largely increased production to meet the needs of the emergency period.

Wall Street quarters noted the Treasury official stressed the danger of ination but he warned too of heavier taxes and suggested stronger controls over bank credit and capital expenditures.

The stock market operated under a welter of speculative restraints. Many potential bidders continued to wait upon President Roosevelt's address Thursday night. Unwillingness to extend commitments was accentuated, brokers said, by the strike vote of rail unions and the OPM's granting to Price Administrator Henderson of full authority over production of automobiles and other consumer durable goods.

Prices were up generally at the opening but unimpressive action of the leaders brought a shift to the downside and closing prices were near the lows. Off 1 to 2 or more points were Union Pacific, Dupont, American Can, Douglas, Consolidated Aircraft and Eastman. Down fractions were many of the steels, motors, oils and rails. Rubbers were resistant. International nickel established a 1941 high. A number of foreign bonds pushed ahead while corporate loans were mixed.

The Associated Press 60 stock composite dipped .2 of a point at 43.8. It has recorded no advance since September 2. Dealings were 524,260 shares against 873,280 yesterday.

In the Curb, lower marks were posted by Aluminum Co., American Cyanamid, Glen Alden Coal and Sherwin Williams. Transfers here were approximately 125,000 shares compared with 170,000 yesterday.

It was another day of strongly rising prices for a group of foreign dollar bonds and narrow movements in the domestic list.

Belgium 6s rose 12 points, to 93. Norway 6s with declaration advanced 23 points, to 85. The 4s with declaration gained 3⅛, at 45⅛. Taiwan Electric Power 5½s added 7 at 41. Others up to around 4 points included Australia 4½s, Japan 5½s and 6½s, New South Wales 5s, Tokyo 5½s, Prague 7½s and Oriental Development 6s. (With declaration means the holder has asserted he is a citizen of the United States and his holdings do not represent any foreign element.)

Strength in the foreign dollar group was traced by market analysts to optimism in some quarters over recent war developments.

United States Governments leaned to the offside both on the Stock Exchange and over the counter, but losses were small and trading routine.

Commodities React in Wave Of Profit Sales

By the Associated Press

Secretary Morgenthau's warning against inflation, coupled with a suggestion that the Government release its surplus farm products, produced a wave of profit-taking that forced most commodity futures values down sharply yesterday.

Of Chicago grains, wheat lost 1¼ to 1½ cents a bushel, corn 1⅛ to 1½ cents and soy beans 1⅛ to 4⅛ cents.

Morgenthau's suggestion that U. S. imports of Canadian wheat be increased caused Winnipeg futures to advance in active trading, only to lose the gains at the close.

Hogs at Chicago were strong to 10 cents a hundredweight higher but cattle were 10 to 15 cents lower.

Cotton futures broke at the opening in all major markets and were down about $2 a bale most of the day. New York cottonseed oil quotations also slumped, losing about ¼ cent a pound.

Wool tops futures also followed the downturn.

World sugar futures slumped on reduction of Cuba-United States freight rates, domestic contracts gaining a shade.

Santos coffee futures, unaffected by any Governmental action that might follow Morgenthau's statement, rose as much as .15 of a cent a pound.

Closing prices of farm product futures in New York in some cases were near the day's poorest.

Soybeans Margins Boosted

Chicago, Sept. 10 (AP).—Increased margin requirements for certain types of trading in soybean and grain futures on the Board of Trade went into effect today.

Higher margins were ordered by the clearing house because of recent sharp price rises, particularly in soybeans.

Initial margin requirements on soybean futures transactions, other than hedging or spreading transactions, were raised from 15 to 25 cents per bushel. Initial margin requirements on other grains were left unchanged at 10 cents a bushel on wheat, rye and barley, 8 cents on corn and 6 cents on oats.

However, traders must maintain certain minimum margins. These margins on wheat, barley and rye were advanced from 4 to 6 cents, on soybeans from 10 to 16 cents, on corn from 3 to 4 cents and on oats from 2 to 3 cents.

Coffee Trade Seeks Packing Priority

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Sept. 10 (AP).—The National Coffee Association urged the Office of Production Management today to allot the industry proper packing materials, because of coffee's importance in economic and political collaboration with Latin-American nations.

Largest Crops in Four Years Seen Despite August Drought

By the Associated Press

The Agriculture Department reported yesterday that despite August drought conditions, aggregate crop production this year was expected to be nearly 2 per cent above last year and substantially larger than in any previous season except 1937.

Prospects for corn declined slightly during August but wheat production estimates were increased to give the Nation its second largest crop of record. Corn production on the basis of September 1 conditions was forecast at 2,523,964,000 bushels, a drop of about 64,000,000 bushels from the August 1 estimate but still about 75,000,000 bushels above the 1940 crop and about 217,000,000 bushels above the 1930-39 average of 2,307,452,000 bushels.

The department said hot, dry weather which prevailed over much of the corn belt early last month caused the reduction in corn prospects.

The wheat crop was estimated at 957,563,000 bushels, the largest upturn since the 1915 crop of 1,006,637,000 bushels. Production last year totaled 816,698,000 bushels. The 1941 estimate included 684,966,000 bushels of winter wheat, 43,249,000 bushels of durum and 229,348,000 bushels of other spring wheat.

This year's crops of barley, rice, grain sorghums, dry beans, dry peas, soybeans and commercial vegetables were expected to exceed production in any previous season. The department expects the fruit crop to be close to previous records and possibly to exceed them. Flaxseed production was expected to be larger than in any other year except 1902. The peanut crop was said to be second only to the record crop of a year ago.

The department said production of feed grains this year would be above average, but hardly equal to prospective feeding requirements. As a consequence, some further progress may be made, the department said, in utilizing large stocks accumulated in recent years.

The department expects the aggregate production of livestock and livestock products to be probbaly the largest on record.

Reports on milk and egg production continued to show new high records for most of the principal producing areas. The crop of citrus fruits produced from this year's bloom is now expected to be slightly smaller than last year's crop, but this year's production of principal deciduous fruits, including pears, peaches, grapes, cherries, plums, prunes, apricots and apples, is expected to be about 12 per cent above the rather light production last year.

Allowing for the effect of early September rains in the corn belt, prospects for fall pastures and ranges now seem the best since 1928, the department said. Likewise present moisture conditions were described as unusually favorable for fall seeding in most of the winter wheat belt.

G. M. Displays 1942 Models: Arms and Autos

By David J. Wilkie
Associated Press Automotive Editor

Detroit, Sept. 10.—With exhibits and demonstrations of aviation engines and machine guns, shells and bomber parts and a long list of other material of war, General Motors Corporation today showed some 300 news and trade paper writers how the mass production capacity and ingenuity of the world's largest automobile manufacturing company has been assigned to the needs of national defense.

C. E. Wilson, corporation president, reported that General Motors would produce a total of more than 400 million dollars of defense material in 1941.

Wilson said that if shipping lanes can be kept open for importation of raw materials unavailable in this country, the "final limitation" on defense and consumer goods production "will undoubtedly be the supply of labor available."

Combined Display

The showing was at the corporation's proving grounds at Milford, Mich. There, in addition to the great number of defense items familiar and unfamiliar to the manufacturing technique of the motor industry, the corporation's various divisions also presented their new model automobiles. These included Chevrolet, Pontiac, Oldsmobile, Buick and Cadillac passenger vehicles as well as truck models of some of the producing units.

The presentation of motorcars was unique in that it was the first time the various divisions of the corporation have combined in one showing of their new model vehicles. The combined showing did not presage any let-down, however, in the friendly rivalry that has existed for years among the corporation's various car manufacturing divisions.

More Streamlined

The new model automobiles presented relatively little in the way of mechanical advances, although the styling of long sweeping fenders and other streamlining features served sharply to differentiate the new models from those of the 1941 season.

"Some people," said C. L. McCuen, vice president in charge of engineering, "may be critical of the automobile industry for bringing out new models at this time. The question is asked why didn't we just continue with what we were producing. The answer is that we could not have effected the savings in materials needed for the defense program without important design changes."

He explained that the design changes, together with the curtailment in volume of cars produced, will effect a saving of 210 million pounds of material.

General Motors already has announced that in subordinating normal activities to national defense it will bring out no new models for 1943.

Cites Future Changes

"Whenever we are privileged to introduce to you our next new models, whether it will be in 1944 or 1945," McCuen said, "you will see many changes. You will see the use of plastics increased; 100 octane fuel will be a general thing after the war; synthetic materials will be in more general use; we will learn many things from this emergency."

General Motors' part in the national defense program is represented in contracts that already total more than $1,200,000,000. They include aviation engines, machine guns, shells, fuses, bomber parts, gun mounts, antiaircraft guns, Diesel engines, aircraft propellers, Army trucks and dozens of other items.

Public announcement of the new model automobiles, along with price schedules, will be made later by each division of the corporation. All divisions now are in production on the new cars.

Earnings Report

Western Union Telegraph Co. reported net income for July of $603,959, compared with $63,623 in July, 1940, and net income for the first seven months of 1941 of $4,039,858, compared with $1,583,248 in the like 1940 period. A. N. Williams, president, said that if the improvement were maintained through the rest of 1941 business would be the best for any year since 1930.

Zenith Radio Corporation reported for the first quarter ended July 31 a consolidated operating profit of $302,956, equal to 60 cents a share on the capital stock, compared with $651,136, or 1.32 in the corresponding quarter of 1940. The figures for both periods are after depreciation, excise taxes and liberal reserves, but before provision for Federal income taxes.

American Power & Light Co. and subsidiaries reported for the June quarter net income was $2,139,480 or $1.20 a share on the combined $6 and $5 preferred stocks against $2,612,628 or 6 cents a share on the common in the 1940 period. The preferred stocks have accumulated unpaid dividends.

Electric Power & Light Corporation reported June quarter net income of $1,027,213, equal to $1.40 a share on the $7 first preferred and $1.20 a share on the $6 first preferred. This compares with $651,686 or 89 cents a share on the $7 first preferred and 76 cents a share on the $6 first preferred in the 1940 quarter. The preferred stocks are in arrears on dividends.

Celotex Corporation reported consolidated net earnings for the nine months ended July 31 of $1,208,704, equal after preferred dividend requirements to $1.72 a share on common stock, compared with $305,459 or 30 cents a common share for the similar nine months of the previous fiscal year. In providing $392,000 for excess profits taxes in the nine months covered, the corporation said the exact amount of liability for that tax could not be determined at present.

Courage of Youth Preferred to Timidity of Age In Both Private Business and Military Forces

When he was 38 last year Tom Dewey was sidetracked from the Presidential nomination largely because of the argument that he was too young, but Dr. Harvey C. Lehman, psychologist of Ohio State University, recently observed before the American Psychological Convention at Evanston, Ill., that man's greatest intellectual powers come at the age of 35 to 40.

His remarks, supported by historical statistics, are timely now with the rapid selection of young men as officers of the expanding armed forces of the United States and with the concurrent choice of a new executive leadership for private corporations. In the last decade there has been an increasing tendency to pick as business leaders young men who were beter attuned to the changing social and political trends.

Dr. Lehman's findings are at variance with the inclination of the older generation to berate the precociousness of youth.

Some time ago a lecturer in Cleveland, according to William Feather, compiled a list of accomplished youthful geniuses—and his object was to correct the notion that an indivadual needs to develop gray hair before he can do really first-rate work. The record of the past will, perhaps, help to give those lacking in self-confidence a new sense of the power of youth, when buttressed by genuine capacity.

Martin Luther was 33 when he wrote the manifesto that led to the Reformation.

John Calvin was 26 when he wrote "The Institutes of Theology."

Patrick Henry was 29 when he made his speech against the Stamp Act.

Thomas Jefferson was 33 when he drafted the Declaration of Independence.

Alexander Hamilton was aide-de-camp to Washington at 20, and at 32 first Secretary of the Treasury.

Danton, leading personality in the French Revolution, was 34 when he was beheaded.

Napoleon was 27 when he was appointed to the command of the French army of Italy, and 35 when he crowned himself Emperor of the French.

Alexander had conquered the known world, and was dead at 33.

Charlemagne was master of France and Germany at 30.

Charles James Fox was a junior lord of the admiralty and a thorn in the side of George III at 21.

William Pitt became chancellor of the exchequer at 23 and prime minister at 24.

Charles Dickens was 24 when he began "Pickwick Papers" and 35 when he wrote "Oliver Twist."

Poe was doing some of his best work at 25.

James Bryce had written "The Holy Roman Empire" at 26.

Benjamin Franklin wrote "Poor Richard's Almanac" at the same age.

Spinoza was a notable person at 24 and a great philosopher at 33.

Keats, Shelly and Byron were dead at 25, 30 and 36, respectively.

Newton grasped the law of gravity at 24.

McCormick and Westinghouse were 23 when they invented the reaper and the airbrake.

Michelangelo did his statue of David at 26.

In view of the foregoing record it is understandable why a topnotch business leader remarked, "I prefer the courage of youth to the timidity of age."

Mehl Declares U. S. Rules Aid Futures' Trade

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Sept. 10.—J. M. Mehl, chief of the Commodity Exchange Administration, told produce and grain brokerage men tonight that Governmental regulation of future trading was designed so that these markets may remain open.

"It may be assumed," he said, "that the institution of futures trading in farm commodities will continue in this country. It is too old and too soundly established as a pricing and insurance medium to be easily cast aside.

"However, it is fruitless to argue that the futures trading system is not subject to change. The whole machinery yis marketing must be adjusted to fit the present as well as the future."

Mehl, who is charged with administration of Governmental authority in regulating trading activities on these markets, spoke at a dinner given by the Chicago Merchantile Exchange for brokers and traders in agricultural commodities.

Mehl said the exchanges have too seemingly paradoxical problems. They must prevent excessive speculation and at the same time maintain volume and liquidity necessary to meet legitimate hedging needs.

Mehl expressed belief that "commodity markets never again will afford the opportunity for speculative adventure that they have in the past. The loan programs, quite aside from the fact that they have operated as minimum price guaranties, have also enabled farmers directly to carry a part of the risk load that formerly had to be assumed by speculators.

"This means smaller volume of trading in some commodities while these commodities are going under loan. But it does not affect the need for the futures market for hedging purposes when the commodities again move back into commercial channels."

Profit Motive Must Remain, Says Banker

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 10.—One hundred and fifty Virginia bankers attending their fourth annual conference at the University of Virginia tonight heard Dr. Paul S. Cadman, economist of the American Bankers Association, declare that the profit motive is the major basis on which human freedom can survive the present emergency.

Tonight's address was the second and concluding lecture by Dr. Cadman at the 1941 conference. He gave the banker "students" a picture of the vast undertaking of this country in financing modern warfare last night.

"America will escape Europe's fate not by more government, more spending, or multiplication of administrative bureaus, but by the independence and vitality of citizens who are willing and capable of assuming personal responsibility over their political and economic destinies," he declared.

Dr. Cadman proclaimed his conviction that without the profit motive mankind cannot enjoy a dynamic society, which he defined as one in which real wealth is increasing and in which all citizens enjoy a rising standard of living with a maximum of personal freedom.

The motives for which man work—for self, family, or institution—are too varied and complex to be captured and administered by any state without a virtual destruction of human freedom, the economist asserted. "There are limits to which the demand for human sacrifice is possible, and government may yet learn these in requiring free men to live by and under arbitrary regulations."

A. T. & T. to File 90-Million Issue, Will Seek Bids

New York, Sept. 10 (AP).—Directors of American Telephone & Telegraph Co. today authorized the filing with the Securities & Exchange Commission of the necessary registration statement covering a proposed issue of 90 million dollars of 2¾ per cent debentures due in 1976.

Proceeds from the issue would be used to redeem on November 1 outstanding 5½ per cent sinking fund debentures due in 1943 which were recetly called.

The company announced it would request the SEC to expedite the registration statement in order that it might be able to solicit competitive bids from investment bankers at an early date. Two major banking syndicates already have been formed to bid on the issue and a third has been discussed.

Morgan Stanley & Co., traditional bankers for Telephone prior to the introduction of the competitive bidding system heads one group and another is headed by Halsey, Stuart & Co. The third includes some of the biggest banking names in New York and Chicago but their interest has thus far not progressed farther than the talking stage.

Listen!
with Glynn

Don't listen right now, but have you noticed that feminism is coming into its own lately in a field which hitherto has been pretty strictly restricted to males?

We refer to the business of announcing on the radio.

Now time was—all of six or seven weeks ago—that you would have had a hard time finding a feminine announcer on any program, even if you were a glutton for punishment and listened to all the programs on all the networks all day and night.

But today at least three big shows, on the Columbia network alone, are employing them. And who are we to miss calling your attention to such a tremendous trend!

A girl announcer does the commercials on Elmer Davis' night broadcast of the news, which you hear at 7:55 over WJSV. Her voice provides a pleasant contrast to the virile tones of the said Mr. Davis.

There's the gal who comes in during the Guy Lombardo program on Saturday nights, not only announcing mind you, but singing the sprightly commercial stint. Then one of the latest feminine additions in the announcing line is Marjorie Anderson who does the announcements on the daytime dramatic serial, "Bright Horizon."

Looks as if the tone of announcing is going up!

Contract Bridge

Expert Charles Goren made eleven tricks on today's hand taken from the Philadelphia open-air championship which he won with Mrs. A. M. Sobel. The contract is three no trump, and East opens the seven of spades. How would you play so as to take two overtricks?

Opening lead: 7 ♠.

Goren made five-odd by squeezing West. East led his highest spade, dummy's singleton ace winning. A small diamond was played from South and East's queen took the trick when declarer finessed the ten. Another spade was returned. West put on his king and continued the ten. Declarer won with the queen, entered the board with the king of clubs and successfully finessed the dismond jack.

Goren then cashed four more clubs, on which he threw offf two hearts, leaving the queen blank. He entered the closed hand with the diamond ace and West was squeezed. He had to unguard his heart king, giving South the ace, ten, or discard his high spade jack, giving declarer the spade nine and the heart ace. West discarded the heart jack and Goren made three no trump with two over tricks, giving up the spade king and the diamond queen.

FIRST MEETING OF SEASON—Members of the Advertising Club of Washington met yesterday at the Raleigh Hotel for the first time this season. Ralph L. Goldsmith (center), vice president and general manager of Lansburgh & Bros., guest speaker, outlined the effort which will be made by Washington retail merchants to sell defense stamps as a part of Retail Demonstration Week, beginning Monday. Ralph L. Goldsmith, vice president and general manager of Lansburg & Bro., addressed the Advertising Club of Washington at its first regular meeting of the season in the Raleigh Hotel yesterday. He outlined the effort which will be made by Washington retail merchants to sell Defense Stamps as a part of Retail Demonstration Week beginning Monday.

Full page advertisements signed by the merchants and manufacturers associations and those stores who will have Defense Stamps for sale will be published in all Washington newspapers. A dinner is to be held in the Mayflower Hotel Monday evening. Donald M. Nelson, director of purchases division, Office of Production Management, will preside. Retail merchants from all parts of the country are planning to attend the dinner in the Mayflower Hotel and managers of all Washington retail stores as well as the public are invited.

Goldsmith told of the experience in one large Western city where the department stores placed Defense Stamps on sale with unusual success, and urged that all retail stores of Washington aid in making it possible for their customers to buy Defense Stamps with a minimum of effort.

Red, White and Blue Cotton Stockings Urged for Coeds

By the United Press

East Lansing, Mich., Sept. 10.—Patriotic coeds who want sex appeal below the knees without "cheapening themselves" by going bare-legged were urged tonight to wear brightly colored cotton stockings in the defense-made silk hosiery shortage.

Declaring that red, white and blue cotton stockings were the "rage" in the Eastern collegiate set, Miss Elisabeth Conrad, dean of women at Michigan State College, said she thought it would be "wonderful" if college women all over America adopted them.

The middle-aged dean, long a foe of bare legs, appealed to the girl's patriotism in advocating the cotton hose.

"America needs the silk that American women put on their legs," she said. "Let's have the college women lead the way in this emergency by voluntarily wearing those lovely, long cotton stockings."

In addition, the dean said, the cotton products cost only half as much as silk stockings, "and every coed can use that extra money."

Although she emphasized that she did not dictate campus fashions, students declared her suggestions were highly regarded by campus governing bodies.

The idea, however, struck only a lukewarm response from the students who returned early for the opening of classes next week.

"Oh," said Ellen Stenega, a pretty blonde from Portland, Mich., "I wouldn't be found dead in them. My patriotism doesn't go that far."

President Margaret Jensen, Grosse Pointe, Mich., of the Associated Women Students, a leading campus organization, said the dean's proposal would be discussed in A. W. S. meetings.

"In view of defense needs," she said, "I'd be for the idea. Besides, the gay colors might help some girls to have attention directed to their legs."

Good-for-Evil Philosophy Still Best, Pastor Says

While the turn-the-other-cheek philosophy may seem "strange, fantastic and quixotic" in today's war madness, it is the only way of overcoming individual or world evils, the Rev. Edwin H. Tuller said here last night.

Mr. Tuller, assistant pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, spoke at chapel exercises at the fourth day's sessions of the young people's fall fellowship rally at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, Ninth Street and Massachusetts Avenue Northwest.

The young people again attended courses on Christian ideals of love and marriage, Christian codes of personal conduct, the church and community, dramatics, publicity, photography and other subjects. The study sessions continue through tomorrow night, while the climaxing program will be a service at Camp Letts, Md., on Saturday, when Dr. John W. Rustin, Mount Vernon pastor, will speak.

Epworth Methodist youths also continued their fall fellowship week activities last night by staging a banquet in the church hall at North Carolina Avenue and Thirteenth Street Northwest. Hartwell Calcote is president.

Army Expects 70,236 Casualties

The War Department estimated last night that there would be 236 deaths and 70,000 other casualties among approximately 752,000 troops who will take part in the record peace-time field maneuvers in September and November.

The department said, however, that the accident and death rates would be considerably lower than for a corresponding number of civilian persons during the same period of time.

The estimates were prepared by the surgeon general of the Army and included the anticipated casualties for both the ground and air forces.

Batterson Estate Goes To Daughter

Mr. Batterson died September 5 at the age of 82 and his will was filed for probate in the District Court yesterday. Miss Batterson and the National Savings & Trust Co., were named executors.

Listed as part of the estate were $245,982 in cash and securities, realty at 1223 I Street Northwest, assessed at $43,636, and realty at 809-11 Thirteenth Street, assessed at $50,280.

Also filed yesterday was the will of J. Dallas Grady, real estate dealer, which gave a net estate of about $120,000 to his wife and children. Mr. Grady died July 24.

The will provided that if the estate should exceed $100,000, Courtney A. McNamara receive $2,500 in "recognition of faithful services as an employe."

Mr. Grady named as trustees and executors his wife, Mrs. Mary E. Grady, Spencerville, Md.; his son, Dallas M. Grady, Lyon Village, Va., and James C. Wilkes, of the law firm of Wilkes, McGarraghy & Artis.

Mr. Grady directed the trustees to pay his wife $200 a month for life, or more, if they thought it desirable, and to pay $100 a month to his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Margaret Costello Grady, for the benefit of herself and her two children. Upon the death of Mrs. Grady the estate is to be equally divided between the son and the grandchildren.

Chicago Blast Razes Warehouse, Perils Loop

Chicago, Sept. 10 (U.P.).—Fire following an explosion swept through a block-square, four-story freight warehouse a half block off Michigan Boulevard tonight, imperiling a number of skyscraper office buildings at the northeast corner of the Loop district.

Fire Commissionetr Michael J. Corrigan termed it "the worst blast in downtown Chicago in more than ten years." He said an explosion accompanied by a powerful gust of blue smoke set off the flames in the warehouse.

The building is owned by the Universal Carloading & Distributing Co., which gathers and delivers freight from the city's major railroad terminals. A company spokesman said the value of the stored merchandise would exceed a million dollars.

Man Kills Self With Gas at Home

Samuel E. Williamson, 57, of 2417 Third Street Northeast, was found dead in the gas filled basement of his home yesterday by his wife, Hattie. The coroner's office issued a certificate of suicide.

Mrs. Williamson said her husband, a carpenter, had been in ill health and had recently suffered a stroke.

Police Bring Peace To Warring Youth

The war rolled up to the doors of the 3000 block of Alabama Avenue Southeast last night—for the third successive evening. It was a noisy war, enacted by the youngest generation, with bugles, drums, wooden guns and a discordant shouting of orders.

So the cops were called.

"Peace is declared," they said when they arrived. And it was—for a night, anyway.

'He Threw a Stool At Me,' Said Kay

OPM to Extend Scrap Drive To District

The national campaign to increase the junking of wornout automobiles to provide additional iron and steel scrap will be extended to the District next week, the OPM announced yesterday.

The campaign is to be launched with a meeting September 19 at Baltimore attended by automobile wreckers and scrap dealers. They will be urged to strip derelict cars now in auto "graveyards" and to scrap the residual bodies and engine blocks immediately.

Ordinarily, OPM officials explained, the old cars remain in the graveyards several years. Now, however, with a shortage of scrap impending, and demands for steel increasing, they said it is imperative to increase scrap collections "materially" above current levels.

About 1500 pounds of iron and steel scrap are obtained from the ordinary junked auto, they estimated. Thus, it was added, one car provides enough scrap for a light cannon, 20 cars enough for a tank.

Scrap dealers and automobile wreckers of Washington, Maryland, Delaware, and New Jersey will discuss the program with OPM officials at a meeting tomorrow afternoon in Baltimore.
